Leaders Act To Postpone White House Additions

Rep. Smith of Va. Asks That Congress Have Opportunity To Examine Project

While White House architects pushed ahead with President Truman's plans to remodel the executive mansion, aroused congressional leaders indicated they would take steps today to halt the $1,650,000 building program.

Representative Howard W. Smith, Democrat of Alexandria, Va., said that he planned to introduce a joint resolution to the House, asking that construction of the new offices and the auditorium be held up until Congress has an opportunity to examine the plans and understand the additions Mr. Truman wants.

Smith said that he expected his resolution to bbe referred to the House Rules Committee, of which he is a member.

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio) announced he would support Smith's resolution "to the limit" and predicted an overwhelming nonpartisan vote in favor of the move to delay construction.

$870,000 Allocated to Crim

Meanwhile, White House Architect Lorenzo S. Winslow said that $870,000 for the office buildings had been allocated to Howell G. Crim, chief usher of the White House. Crim serves as administrative officer for the Executive Mansion and is responsible for all maintenance and building funds.

The $1,650,000 for all improvements, including the grounds, was appropriated in the deficiency bill, passed by Congress. The money was first allocated to the Interior Department but an executive order was issued "late last week" calling for its assignment to Crim, according to Winslow.

Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes said that he knew nothing of the transfer of funds.

"In fact, while the Interior Department is charged with supervision of public buildings—and the White House is a public building—we have never been consulted on the proposed changes, as we should have been," Ickes told The Post.

Winslow Pushing Ahead

Winslow said that his office was pushing ahead with the work on the new buildings. The basement offices of the west wing have been emptied and prepared for excavation for the new foundation.

Bid forms for the work will be sent to contractors sometime this week and it is expected that they bids would be returned and the contract awarded in month, he added.

Surveying for the new building has been completed and a staff of 6 architects are making last minute revisions in the plans, which were approved by the Fine Arts Commission, Winslow said.

The architect alsa said that as further changes are made in the plans, the Fine Art Commission which is charged with approving every Government building built in the District of Columbia, will work

Woman Burned To Death Obeying Doctor's Orders

London, Jan. 22, (U.P.).—Told that her house was burning, Mrs. Ethel Roys, 27, stuck her head out of an upstairs window and cried:

"I can't come down. The doctor said I was not to get up."

Mrs. Roys was burned to death.

Russell Brands FEPC Wedge For Socialism

Says Bill Regulates Taste and Customs Of American People

Senator Russell (D., Ga.) told the Senate yesterday that the bill to create a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission is "an entering wedge to complete state socialism and communism."

Russell spoke on the merits of the measure but the parliamentary situation remained unchanged—the debate technically was upon a motion to amend the journal of Thursday's proceedings. Southern opponents of the bill adopted that tactic last week as a delaying device, and hold that as long as that is under discussion no gag rule can shut off debate.

"We who oppose this so-called but misnamed fair employment practice legislation see beyond it a dangerous and revolutionary measure," Russell said.

Assails Regulation

"We see in this bill the immediate nationalization of all jobs in all lines of industry," he continued. "We see the fundamental right of the employer as to whom he shall hire or fire taken away from him." He added that the measure "undertakes to regulate the taste, customs, habits and manners of life of all the American people."

The legislation would prohibit racial and religious discrimination i nbusiness.

Russell earlier had said the proposal would make a "lackey" of the President.

Declaring that proponents of the measure to establish a permanent fair employment practice commission "can't scare us" with talk of continuous sessions, Russell added that when he and his Southern colleagues get through "the public will understand what's in this bill."

The Georgian told a reporter the measure is the first one he has ever seen which would give a board "the power to order the President to do something without any option. It makes a lackey out of the President."

Wants Early End

His comment came after Senator Norse (R., Oreg.), reminding newsmen that President Truman had called anew in his state-of-the-Union message yesterday for action on a permanent FEPC, asserted:

"Congress should proceed without stalling or delay to stand up and be counted on the merits of the recommendations set forth. We ought to dispose of it this week and end the unconscionable filibuster that threatens majority rule in the Senate."

Cold Weather Hinders Effort To Check Blaze

Arlington County firemen stood in sub-freezing temperatures yesterday afternoon to fight a stubbon blaze which caused an estimated $25,000 damage to the Washington Concrete Products Corp. plant on Route 1 south of the 14th Street Bridge.

The fire was discovered at 2:30 under the crushing shed. Company officials said they were not sure of its origin, but stated that it spread quickly through the company's manufacturing plant, and through piles of dry lumber kept there.

While office equipment and records, kept in a small building fronting the highway, were not damaged by the blaze, H. A. Davis, president, estimated that damage to machinery, equipment and the plant building would reach $25,000.

Firemen from four Arlington companies fought the blaze for nearly two hours. They had to stop to squeeze freezing water out of their socks and shoes in order to continue their duties.

The fire was the first sizeable blaze of the year in Arlington County. Last major conflagration was in early December, when a 5000-gallon runaway truck trailer loaded with gasoline crashed into a milk truck in Rosslyn, rocking the foundations of the Rosslyn branch of the Arlington Trust Co. and gutting the office building of the State Loan Co.

Yank Train Guard Kills Red Officer, Wounds Another

Vienna, Jan. 22 (AP).—Sgt. Shirley B. Dixon of Toledo, Ohio, a railway guard on a special train between Salzburg and Vienna, shot and killed a Russian captain and wounded a Russian lieutenant on the night of January 14 when the two boarded the American train without authorization, United States Army Headquarters said today.

The incident is under investigation. A court martial is expected within a week to bring out details.

The two Russians had first boarded the train with a number of Russian enlisted men, headquarters said. They left when told the train was only for American troops, but the officers returned. Witnesses said Dixon shot in the belief that one of the Russians was drawing a gun.

Felix Gouin Named to Head French Regime

Communist Victory Seen in Selection; De Gaulle to Explain

Paris, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Felix Gouin, Socialist speaker of the National Assembly, was nominated today to head a new French coalition government of Communists, Socialists and Popular Republicans.

Nomination of Gouin to succeed General Charles DeGaulle was considered a victory for the Communists, who earlier in the day had refused the candidacy of Socialist Vincent Auriol and had refused to consider anyone else but Gouin.

In advancing Gouin's candidacy to break the three-day crisis that has existed since DeGaulle resigned suddenly Sunday afternoon, the Communist political bureau declared that he was a "personality over and above politics."

DeGaulle to Explain

(A radio Paris broadcast heard by CBS said that De Gaulle would release two statements to the press after the new government was formed, one stating his reasons for his political retirement and the other addressed to "the men who joined him on June 18, 1940.")

Gouin had steadfastly refused to accept the nomination throughout the crisis. Late today, however, he accepted when Socialists and Popular Republicans agreed to his candidacy.

It was expected that Gouin's nomination would enable Foreign Minister Georges Bidault to keep his post and return to London to continue representing France at the United Nations General Assembly.

Popular Republicans held a late

Short Says He Was Made 'Scapegoat'

Charges Army High Command Failed To Inform Him of Pearl Harbor Peril

By Mary Spargo
By a Post Staff Writer

Sunk in "complacency," the Army high command failed to give him vital information and then tried to make him the "scapegoat" for the Pearl Harbor disaster, Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short charged yesterday.

The Army's 1941 Hawaiian commander, now retired after being charged with dereliction of duty, told the Joint Congressional Committee investigating the attack that he thought he had been treated most unjustly.

"I do not feel that I have been treated fairly or with justice by the War Department," Short declared.

Singled Out as Example

"I was singled out as an example, as a scapegoat for the disaster. My relatively small part in the transaction was not explained to the American people until this Joint Congressional Committee forced the revelation of the facts."

Short added that he did not think it had been necessary to "pass the buck" to him.

"I am sure that an honest confession by the War Department general staff of their failure to anticipate the surprise raid would have been understood by the public in the long run and even at the time.

"Instead they 'passed the buck' to me, and I have kept my silence until the opportunity of this public forum was presented to me."

Italy's King Plans To Hand Throne To Grandson, 8

Rome, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—King Vittorio Emanuele plans to hand his throne over to his 8-year-old grandson, the Prince of Naples, high British officers close to the royal family said today.

The officers said Crown Prince Umberto, who now is lieutenant-general of Italy, will waive his rights to the throne and retire to private life.

A regency would be in charge of regal affairs until Umberto's son, the Prince of Naples, reached majroity. Cardinal Alfredo Idlefonse Schuster of Milan is considered a likely head of the regency.

The king has been in virtual retirement since the 1943 armistice and while he still holds his title, Umberto has taken over most of his duties.

GI Wives Rout Eisenhower; Navy Cuts Discharge Scores

IKE STANDS GROUND WITH MOTHERS—General Eisenhower met a group of irate war mothers yesterday in the office of Representative Andrew J. Changes Effective in March, April to Free 191,100 in Navy

By the Associated Press

The Navy announced last night further cuts in point scores for discharge.

Effective March 15 and again on April 2, the latest changes are expected to make an additional 14,700 officers and 176,400 enlisted personnel eligible for release.

By April 2, reported Vice Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of Naval Personnel, the Navy's demobilization program will be two-thirds completed. It now is scheduled to pass the halfway mark of 1,500,000 discharges by February 1.

The critical score for enlisted men, fixed at 42 points for release after March 2, is reduced to 31 points effective March 15 and 30 points effective April 2, the Navy statement said.

Down to 38 March 15

For male commissioned and warrant officers, the March 2 score of 39 is dropped to 38 after March 15 and 37 after April 2.

For women officers, the March 2 requirement of 27 points will continue in effect until April 2, when it will drop to 26.

For enlisted women, the March 2 requirement of 21 points will continue in effect until April 2, when it will drop to 20.

For male doctors, the March 2 score of 49 is reduced to 48 after March 15 and 40 after April 2.

Reductions also were made in point requirements for varied classes of personnel "whose eligibility for demobilization," Admiral Denfeld said, "has demanded a slightly higher score because of their essential duties."

1,434,054 Discharged

"In the case of enlisted personnel in these classifications," he continued, "it is anticipated that on or before June 2, 1946, we shall be able to effect further reduction which will bring their scores on a par with the general scores for all men and female enlisted personnel."

Meanwhile, the Navy announced it had granted 1,434,054 discharges from VJ-Day to the start of this week. Discharges last week totaled 74,453.

Points are accumulated in the Navy at the rate of a half-point for each month on active duty and each year of age, and one-fourth point for each month of service outside the United States. In addition, 10 are allowed persons with one or more dependents.

Shrill Task Force Intercepts Ike on Way To Testify in House

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

The man whose military genius brought the Wehrmacht to its knees was routed yesterday by a shrill task force of women.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff of the Army, was cornered in a House Office Building corridor by a score of servicemen's wives who emphatically wanted their husbands back. Unable to cope with them, he retreated into the office of Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the House Military Committee, where he listened to their queries for half an hour, answered them as best he could and autographed them all his autograph.

Later in the day, on the House floor, Representative Dondero (R., Mich.) said he believed "a shrewd and well-organized Communist conspiracy" was behind recent soldier demonstrations against the Army's demobilization policy. He cited "provable" facts to support his contention.

Fired Salvo of Questions

Eisenhower was on his way to a session of the House Military Committee to give his third explanation within a week of the Army's demobilization program when he was waylaid by the women. Previously he had explained demobilization to an informal session of Congress and before a subcommittee of the Senate Military Committee.

Representing several organizations, they fired a salvo of questions under which he quailed and, obviously embarrassed, backed into May's office. The women followed him, all talking at once until May suggested that they name a spokesman. Mrs. Dorothy Galemb of Wilkinsburg, Pa., was chosen and laid their case before the Army commander.

Mothers whose husbands are still in the service, she said, are not satisfied with the way demobilization is going and said that one marriage out of three is ending in divorce. Most of these are in service families, she said, adding and why not with so many pictures of fraternization overseas being published.

"We Want Our Husband"

"How do you think we mothers feel?" she asked. "Marriage won't stand this isolation.

She is the mother of two children, she said, and her husband is a private stationed at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

"Is it fair?" she demanded, "that fathers be kept in up to the age of 38 when even single men of that age are no longer being drafted? Is it fair that air cadets are being

Action Due Today; U. S. Hopes Men Will Return

AFL Strikers Are Willing to Work For Government; No CIO Assurances

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Government officials last night completed plans for seizing the strike-bound meat-packing industry, probably today. They are acting on the assumption that the CIO-United Packing House Workers will return to work under Government operation.

The union, the majority organization in the industry, refused to give a definite commitment to end their walkout to Assistant Labor Secretary John W. Gibson, who conferred here most of yesterday with their leaders.

AFL Gives Assurances

It was believed, however, that the union representatives, returning to Chicago today, would persuade the rank and file to resume their jobs when the Government takes over. The AFL union in the industry has already given its assurance of ending the strike in the event of seizure.

The orders providing for Federal operation, it was learned, call for the Government's fact-finding board to complete its hearings on appropriate wage increases for the workers and for the resultant recommendations to be presented to the National Wage Stabilization Board for approval.

The fact-finding board began its hearings yesterday in Chicago. It is obliged to make its recommendations by February 16.

Objects to Seizure

Earlier yesterday, the CIO union in Chicago issued, through its strategy committee, a strong statement objecting to seizure on the grounds such action would be "playing into the packers' hands."

It was thought, however, that Gibson and Secretary Schwellenbach had explained to the union's representatives here that they could expect fair action from the fact-finding panel, resulting in an equitable wage increase. The union has been demanding a 17½ cents 15 cents.

Gibson, rendering more firm a an hour increase, later reduced to 15 cents.

Gibson, rendering more firm a prediction yesterday by White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, stated flatly last night that the industry would be seized.

Price Rise Plan Dropped

All hope of settling the dispute through an OPA grant of a price increase high enough so that the packers would agree to meet the workers' wage demands, was abandoned yesterday, it was learned.

Among labor and reconversion advisers at the White House, the hope was to restore production swiftly in meat processing, so that the overhanging danger of a meat famine could be removed and the Government could thereby proceed to handling the crucial and dominant labor issue—the steel wage strike.

No concrete action was taken yesterday by the Government in the steel situation, it appeared. However, the President is being urged by many of his advisors not to let the matter linger for many more houre in the present stalemate. It is possible that he may open up further discusions with the industry, in which 750,000 workers are now on strike.

Agree on Mediation

In a surprise move, the Labor Department took action yesterday in the strike of 200,000 workers who have walked out of the country's three biggest electrical manufacturing plants. The CIO United Electrical Workers and the General Electric and Westinghouse companies agreed to a proposal of Schwellenback to sit in on mediation conferences.

The meeting began yesterday, with Arthur S. Meyer, New York State Mediation Board chairman and William H. Davis, former chairman of the National War Labor Board, as mediators. They adjourned with plans for reconving tomorrow in Meyer's office in New York.

Surrender Ultimatum

Greeks Spare Rebel Fortress As Insurgents Free Hostages

Athens, Jan. 22 (AP).—Government commanders tonight countermanded orders to their troops to storm a monarchist rebel stronghold in the mountains near Kalamai (Kalamata) as the holdout insurgents realesed 46 of their hostages.

Gen. Stylianos Bgilakis, head of the gendarmerie in Kalamai, in making the announcement gave no indication whether the insurgents had bowed to an ultimatum to surrender (by 9 a. m., EST today). The monarchists were reported to have seized 150 hostages in an uprising in the Kalamai area Sunday, and to have slain eight of them.

Greek troops aided police in restoring order to the Peloponnesus port city.

The Ministry of Public Order said fragmentary reports early in the day indicated that only about 500 of the original rebel force of some 3000 armed men remained in the mountain positions 10 miles northwest of Kalamai.

The outbreak was attributed to reprisals by members of the "X" organization, a royalist group, for the reported slaying by Communists last week of four royalists.

The Communist organization KKE charged the British were responsible for "monarcho-fascist terrorism in Greece" by directly or indirectly supplying weapons to right-wing elements.

Greek Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said "British military forces are in Greece with the full consent of the Greek government and are in earnest collaboration with it in maintaining order."

U. N. Sure Russia's Protest Against Britain Can Be Settled

U. N. to Protect U. S. Interests in Pacific, Acheson Declares

By the Associated Press

Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson expressed confidence yesterday that the United Nations arrangements for trusteeships would protect the interests of the United States in startegic Pacific islands.

President Truman last week disclosed that the U. S. would seek such exclusive trusteeships from the U. N. for some islands formerly owned or governed by Japan.

In the event the U. S. wanted control over startegic Pacific areas formerly mandated to British Dominions, this country presumably would negotiate the matter wiht the Dominions and probably with the U. N. Security Council, Acheson said.

He expressed belief that it would not necessarily require approval of a general peace conference for the U. S. to continue indefinite control over former Japanese-held islands taken by American forces.

He said that to his knowledge there had been no secret agreements in any Big Three meetings calling for indefinite U. S. possession of any Pacific areas.

It also was his impression, he said, that the agreement at Yalta on the Kurile Islands called simply for Russian occupation of that chain as a military operation, rather than for permanent Soviet possession.

On this issue, however, Acheson indicated he might be wrong and quoted the saying of a judge who said his court might be in error "but never in doubt."

U. S. Seen Serving As Pacifier in Dispute Over Greece, Java

London, Jan. 22 (AP).—United Nations leaders declared optimistically tonight that the newly born peace agency could settle amicably the Russian protest against British policy in Greece and Java.

They discounted talk that the surprise move by Russia and the Ukraine might create a crisis at the very outset of the Nnited Nations meeting.

The first major test of UN ability to smooth international friction brought the comment from UN president, Paul-Henri Spaak, of Belgium, that there were "no grounds for pessimism" and a warning from him against falling into 'the error of the League of Nations" by putting off major problems.

Stifle Talk of Crisis

American officials soft-pedaled talk of a crisis and said they were not alarmed. They saw the United States moving into a middle-man, pacifier role between the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom.

A qualified British source said his government felt it had "nothing to fear or be ashamed of, and certainly nothing to conceal" and that it would not oppose an intervention.

British Prime Minister Attlee told Commons the British aspired only to "an amicable settlement" between the Dutch and the Nationalists in Java. He did not touch on the Greek question.

Britain's attitude further was

Whittled Fact-Finding Bill Approved By House Group

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Labor Committee yesterday whittled down the labor-management fact-finding bill to a bare skeleton of the President's recommendations and approved what was left by a majority of 10 to 8.

The committee action, modest as it was, was the first break in the congressional stalemate on labor disputes legislation and may carry the entire issue to the floor of the House next week.

The next move is up to the House Rules Committee which late this week will pass on the scope of the amendments that can be offered to the bill. If the committee grants an open rule, an entirely new measure may be written on the floor of the House.

As approved by the Labor Committee, the bill provides for fact-finding boards to settle labor disputes, but removes these two key provisions of the President's plan:

1. Power for the boards to subpena company books and records as well as union data.

2. A 30-day cooling-off period before a strike could be called.

Acting Labor Chairman Jennings Randolph, (D., W. Va.) said he voted to report the more limited bill "so the House will have an opportunity to approve or disap-

Unilateral Action

By Sumner Welles

A Latin American Point Of View

THE INTER-AMERICAN Conference at Rio de Janeiro, called off last October by the unilateral action of the United States, is now scheduled to be held soon after March 15.

In accordance with the Act of Chapultepec, signed by all of the American republics a year ago, the conference will consider the conclusion of a treaty for the maintenance of regional peace and security.

The Department of State has submitted to all of the other American governments, except Argentina, its proposal for a military defense treaty.

The United States project differs fundamentally from the commitments embodied in the Act of Chapultepec.

The Act of Chapultepec provided that all the governments of the American republics shall consider the conclusion of such a treaty. Its provisions specifically envisaged the inclusion of Argentina.

THE ACT OF Chapultepec further charges that the proposed treaty shall embody these principles:

"First. That all sovereign states are juridically equal amongst themselves:

"Second. That every state has the right to the respect of its individuality and independence on the part of the other members of the international community."

These stipulations are conspicuously lacking in the draft proposed by the Department of State.

Mexico, Brazil and Ecuador have now also submitted their own treaty projects. They have sent their proposals to Argentina as well as to the other American republics. These 3 are among the 10 American republics which have already opposed the Uruguayan recommendation for intervention in the internal affairs of the sovereign American nations which was so promptly sponsored by the Department of State.

I have just received a letter from a prominent official of a great Latin-American republic, which is not Argentina. This official is one of the ablest of the younger generation of Latin-American statesmen. He has long been a firm friend of the United States as well as an enthusiastic supporter of the Good Neighbor Policy.

HE WRITES:

"You will surely remember that during the San Francisco Conference, through a formal agreement entered into with the Latin-American delegates by former Secretary of State Stettinius, the Government of the United States promised to support a multilateral treaty covering the entire inter-American system as set forth in the Act of Chapultepec.

"That was the origin of the initiative for convoking a conference at Rio de Janeiro.

"The Department of State has now made a wholly different proposal. The Government of the United States has announced that it favors the conclusion of a treaty which does not embody the inter-American system but which will be limited solely to a military alliance for the defense of the continent.

"I must confess to you that this change of front is interpreted as a failure to comply with a promise made. It is regarded as a demonstration that the policy of the 'Good Neighbor' is being unequivocally scrapped, and that at the same time the inter-American system itself is being abandoned.

"But even more than that, the Government of the United States has sent its draft for the military alliance which it desires to secure in Rio de Janeiro to all of the Latin-American governments with the exception of the Argentine government.

THE IMPRESSION which this has created in Latin-American diplomatic circles is concrete. It can be set forth in the following way:

"'1. The United States has proposed a treaty which is different and very much more limited than that which it had agreed upon;

"'2. By such action the United States is plainly abandoning the inter-American system;

"'3. Even in the negotiation of the treaty and prior to the Rio de Janeiro Conference, the United States is commencing by excluding—solely of its own sweet will, without any prior consultation of any kind, and without the consent of the other countries—one of the most important nations of the hemisphere.'

"By a curious coincidence the government of Panama has now taken the initiative in inviting the other governments of America to break diplomatic relations with Nicaragua, Honduras and Santo Domingo. This initiative, in my judgment, is intended to create a precedent for the case of Argentina. But this involves the same dangerous procedure, the procedure of seeking the exclusion from the inter-American system of nations and government without unanimous consent, and by the sole action of a group of countries which, whether justifiably or unjustifiably, are regarded by the public as particularly susceptible to the influence of the Department of State."

THESE VIEWS ARE those of an objective and friendly Latin-American official. They deserve the very careful thought of all of us who regard inter-American solidarity as essential to the security of the Western Hemisphere.

The Department of State continues to insist that unilateral action is abhorrent to it. Yet simultaneously it resorts to unilateral action by excluding Argentina from the consideration of its inter-American treaty project.

It proclaims that the doctrine of nonintervention is "fundamental and will continue." And at the same time, the Department of State publicly asserts over the radio that intervention is all right, provided "a substantial number" of the American republics go along.

The signs of the rapid disintegration of the inter-American system are apparent to all who are willing to see them. If there were some non-American power or influence which desired to undermine the present world influence of the United States by destroying the solidarity of the Western Hemisphere, it could not have done a better job than that accomplished by the Department of State.

President's Message

By Mark Sullivan

Democratic Cleavage

LAST SEPTEMBER President Truman sent to Congress, in a comprehensive message, some 14 legislative proposals. Afterward he sent several others separately. This week, in his state-of-the Union and budget message, he sent still more. The total is over 25, possibly the largest number ever sent by a President within so short a period.

Sullivan

The proposals are so diverse that no generalization can be made to apply to all of them. They are, for the most part, separate proposals dealing with separate needs and subjects, ranging from universal military service to health insurance. The one thing the proposals have in common is that all depend for their outcome on the reaction of Congress to them. Abcut this, again, no generalization can be made. Some of the proposals involve little or no difference of opinion about principle. But some do.

The relation between President Truman and Congress is what it is. The relation between the Presidency as an institution, and Congress as an institution, is not a fixed thing. While the separate functions of the two are set out in the Constitution, the basic relation there established has been extended in practice. But the practice itself varies. The actual working relation between a President and a Congress at any time is determined by conditions which change from President to President and from Congress to Congress and even betwee two sessions of the same Congress.

In the present situation, the response of Congress to Mr. Truman's proposals will be determined by some three or four major considerations, including, of course, the merit of the proposals, in the judgment of members of Congress as individuals. Another factor is popularity of the measures, a basis of judgment not always identified with merit.

AN ESPECIALLY weighty factor in the present condition has to do with Mr. Truman not as President but in the role of head of his party. Normally Democrats would prefer to support the President's program as the program of the party. But today the practical fact is that the Democrats in Congress are divided into two groups. And one group regards much of the President's program as the program not of the party but of the opposing group. The vivid proof is the spectacle of some 20 Democratic Senators opposing, in some cases to the length of filibuster, even the consideration of a measure urged by the President which most of the other Democrats support. While the Fair Employment Practice bill is an especially stark basis of cleavage, much the same condition exists as respects others of the President's proposals. It exists in the House as well as the Senate.

Members of Congress judge presidentialy urged programs in part by the popularity of the program, and whatever my be the momenary status of the freqeuntly shifting popularity of the President at the time. About this, Congress feels there is a test. After Mr. Truman had sent in most of his program, and Congress had delayed in acting upon it, he addressed the country by radio, asking the people to put pressure on Congress. The response to Mr. Truman's urging did not convince Congress—members reported that the number of telegrams or letters they received was not impressive.

Regardless of the apparent ineffectiveness of the results, Mr. Truman's solicitation of public pressure on members of Congress was not helpful in his relations with that body. Because of the aggressiveness of organized pressure by some special groups during the past two or three years, members of Congress have come to resent it, and also to discount it, as being mainly the activity of comparatively small groups of organizers, rather than any spontaneous expression of large numbers of citizens. Almost there is on the part of many members a kind of fraternity of resistance. Definitely members of Congress are in a mood to follow their judgment and depend for approval on their own contacts with the voters of their districts and States.

AS BETWEEN Congress and President, the public tends to support the latter, partly because one man is easier to visualize than a body of 531. This is natural, but Congress is justified in feeling that it is unfortunate and unfair. The public does not grasp the thoroughness and extent of the information and basis for judgment on legislative proposals which congressional committees acquire by prolonged hearings of witnesses, including experts. And Congress knows, as most of the public does not realize, that proposals for legislation coming from the White House reflect not merely the President but bureaus and branches of the executive department. These have become so many and so large that no President is able in all cases to command them; he is obliged in some cases to accept their recommendations and be their spokesman. What may seem a difference on policy between Congress and the President is sometimes more truly a difference between Congress and a branch of the executive department.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Poor Staff Work

THE STAFF WORK of the White House was revealed in a curiously depressing light by Big Steel's refusal to settle its labor dispute on the terms proposed by the President. The contingency had plainly not been prepared for. When it arose, all was confusion. In the first phase, the resulting flurry of White House meetings disclosed only division of council. Some advocated further price concessions. Some demanded Government seizure of the steel plants. And the President simply reiterated his reluctance to use war powers in peacetime.

This indecision, and the mildness of the President's fruitless statement asking Mr. Fairless to reconsider, did not imply amibility toward the steel industry. On the contrary, the President has expressed himself to callers with great force and bitterness, charging the leaders of the steel industry with jobbing and tricking him. What is singular is that he should have been so surprised, since plenty of men in the lower echelons of the Administration foresaw what would occur.

IN TRUTH, Philip Murray is by no means alone in suspecting that steel, motors and the other key industries involved in labor disputes have adopted a united front strategy. The belief is widespread among Government economists and labor experts. The milder spirits merely assume that the purpose of the alleged united front is to force an even sharper break in the price line than would have resulted from the $4 per ton increase promised the steel companies as a reward for settling with the steelworkers. The cynics hold that the object is to break or weaken the labor movement, or at any rate the CIO, repeating the pattern of 1920, when there was an interindustry strategy committee known as the Special Conference Committee. Even those who did not fear a united front expected further bargaining on prices.

Yet although so many officials, some in key positions, either anticipated Big Steel's action or thought it quite possible, no preparation was made to deal with the situation that action has created. It was therefore inevitable that there should be the division of council already noted, between those who would make further price concessions, and those who would seize the steel plants under the authority conferred by the Smith-Connally Act. As these words are written, the division is so complete that the outcome cannot be predicted. Two points deserve to be noted, however.

INITIAL PRESSURE for further price concessions came mainly from the region of the former WPB, now Civilian Production Administration, and was at first resisted both by Chester Bowles of OPA and by John Snyder, OWMR director, the man who had made the original promise of a $4 per ton increase to the steel industry. Thus, in the first phase at least, those who favored giving way on prices were a small minority. On the other hand, few but Bowles had the decision to advocate seizure in the early meetings. Both Snyder and Schwellenbach were undetermined. As for President Truman himself, his constant emphasis on his desire not to use emergency wartime powers suggested that he did not altogether grasp the scope and gravity of the emergency which now confronts him.

In time the President will be forced to recognize the scope of the emergency—he may well have done so, of course, before this is printed. According to a calculation prepared by Government experts, the steel strike in conjunction with the motors and other current strikes, will cause an overall unemployment total of 10 millions.

EVENTUALLY, therefore, some kind of major action must be taken, for the steel strike is incalculably more serious, in general effect, than the meatpacking dispute. The meatpacking strike will merely reduce us to a diet of eggs and spaghetti. The steel strike will knock the spots out of the whole economy. Yet seizure was given favorable consideration in the meat case long before it was even seriously debated in the case of steel.

Meanwhile, one aspect of the strike situation, overlooked in the press, is being anxiously canvassed in the Government on all levels, including the highest. The present CIO leadership is composed of comparative moderates—men like Walter Reuther and Philip Murray, who accept the premises of the American system, however advanced their social thinking. If the national struggle between labor and industry results in a defeat, or even a severe setback for the CIO, these men will be replaced. They will be replaced, moreover, by the extremists of the left, who do not accept our system's premises. To weaken the labor movement for a little while, at the expense of installing the most extremist type of labor leadership, seems a poor bargain for any industrialist.

Auto Dealer Pays $9,015.05 In OPA Suit

James McMahon, owner of McMahon's Chevrolet Co., 6323 Georgia ave. nw., has paid $9,015.05 in an out of court settlement for overcharges on automobile repairs, District OPA revealed yesterday.

OPA said the check represented three times the amount of overcharges during the period from January 22, 1945, to December 22, 1945. The money has been sent to the United States Treasury.

McMahon's office reported that he was out of town and not available for comment. OPA Enforcement Attorneys Carl W. Berueffy and J. Grahame Walker were assigned to the case.

OPA added that an additional $150 also had been collected from two food dealers for overcharges. The Triangle Delicatessen, 1660 Vermont ave. nw., owned by Mrs. Anna Sarris, paid $100 for 25 cent overcharges on beef sandwiches.

Joseph Cohen, owner of the Columbia Market, 3000 Georgia ave. nw., paid $50 for selling rib-beef steak for 43 cents a pound when the ceiling price was 33 cents.

Operates on Self For Appendicitis

Brisbane, Australia (AP). — An Australian army officer at Mindanao, Capt. Robert K. McLaren of Bundaberg, Queensland, successfully operated on himself for appendicitis.

McLaren, a veterinary surgeon, was attacked by acute appendicitis. Alone, except for a Filipino boy, he cut his body open without an anaesthetic. While the Filipino held a mirror over the wound he removed his own appendix and sewed up the incision. The operation took 3 hours.

Wedding Bells Tam Pistol-Packin' Pap

Broadus, Mont. (AP). — Powder River County got its name from frequent gun fights in pioneer days but now, declares Court Clerk H. R. Straiton, it's one of the most peaceful counties in the country. Evidence: in 1945 there were 126 marriages, one divorce.

He Has Champagne Money, but Beer Taste

London (AP).—James Frederick Smeed, champagne steward to four of Britain's rulers, has dispensed thousands of bottles of champagne but never touched a drop. Yet he is no teetotaller.

A beer-drinker, Smeed says he has seen "too many people put on their backs" through champagne drinking.

The Gallup Poll

Republicans Hold Majority Among Midwest Farmers

By George Gallup
Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 22.—Although Democratic Party leaders are going after Midwest farm votes this year with renewed intensity, all evidence to date shows that the Republican Party is holding its own in the farm areas. The Democrats will have to turn some near-miracles if they expect to walk off with a majority of Midwest farm votes in 1946 or 1948.

Latest soundings of farm sentiment by the Institute find that only slightly more than four farmers in every 10 in the Midwest area say they would vote Democratic if a presidential election were held today.

In the solid South it is a different picture, of course, with the Southern farmers still strongly Democratic, in fact, more Democratic now than they were in 1944.

Farm sentiment was measured in the following question:

If a presidential election were being held today, which party would you vote for—the Democratic or Republican?

Midwest Farmers

	Rep.	Dem.
1936 Election	44%	56%
1940 Election	55	45
1944 Election	57	43
TODAY	58	42

The percentages represent the average for farm sentiment in the combined area of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Missouri.

The Truman Administration can count as usual, however, on a strong backlog of Southern farm votes. With the Southern farmers counted in, the picture of total farm sentiment is more favorable to the Democrats.

All Farmers

	Rep.	Dem.
1940	46	54
1944	52	48
TODAY	49	51

The increase in Democratic percentages this year as compared to 1944 comes about because of a rise in Democratic strength among Southern farmers. Whereas the vote among Southern farmers in 1944 is estimated at 66 per cent Democratic, today the survey finds approximately three out of four Southern farmers favoring the Democrats if a presidential election were held.

This gain, however, is of no particular value to the Democrats in a presidential election, because increased strength in the solid South does not bring any increase in electoral votes.

A relatively small Democratic gain in Midwestern States could yield much richer political dividends in an election year than a very substantial gain in States where a Democratic majority has always been assured.

Mexico Reported Ready To Study Trade Treaty

Mexico City, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Unofficial sources said tonight Mexico had accepted an invitation to form a joint U. S.-Mexican commission to study possible changes in the existing trade treaty between the two countries. The Mexican delegation is scheduled to arrive in Washington the first part of February.

Bataan Hero to Seek Michigan Senatorship

Traverse City, Mich., Jan. 21 (AP). Friends of Maj. Arthur W. Wermuth said today the "one-man Army of Bataan" has made up his mind to seek the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator from Michigan. The office is now held by Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Republican.

Wermuth said only that he is "interested" but would not care to be quoted until his Army terminal leave expires February 1.

Oldest Arms Factory In U. S. Strike Bound

High Bridge, N. J., Jan. 21 (AP).—The steel strike has shut down the Taylor-Wharton Iron and Steel Company, oldest munitions factory in the Nation and supplier of cannon balls to Washington's armies during the Revolution.

"For the first time in 204 years Taylor-Wharton has been closed by labor trouble," George R. Hanks, president of the firm said.

Braniff Airways Buys Martin 2-0-2 Transports

The purchase by Braniff Airways, Inc., of a fleet of 18 of the new Martin 2-0-2 luxury liners has been announced by T. E. Braniff, President of the airline which bears his name. Total cost of the planes, including maintenance equipment, will be over $4,000,000. Commenting on the purchase of the Martin craft, Mr. Braniff stated, "Continuing our policy of maintaining the best and latest equipment available to a commercial airline, we purchased the 2-0-2 after long investigation and thorough study of all entries in the 30-40 passenger plane field."

TOPS AMONG TRANSPORTS!

America's finest twin-engined transport, the Martin 2-0-2 offers comfort unsurpassed by any airliner . . . cruises in the 300 m.p.h. class with optional exhaust thrust propulsion as pioneered by Martin with the B-26 in 1939. Other advanced features, such as front entrance doors with integral step, were also pioneered by Martin. Millions of man-hours went into the designing of this plane with the result that its operating and maintenance costs, and total costs over years of service are extremely low. Braniff's passengers will have the world's finest air transportation when they fly via Martin 2-0-2!

Senators Back Wallace on Reorganization

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace yesterday won unanimous backing of the Senate Commerce Committee in his request for three additional $10,000-a-year assistant secretaries.

Chairman Bailey (D., N. C.), said the committee would ask the Senate to approve a bill providing additional assistants and authorizing a "reorganization of the Department of Commerce at the top."

"I think Mr. Wallace is going forward with his department in a most intelligent and forward way," Senator Bailye said, after the Cabinet member explained his program for aiding business. "I like his plans."

The Commerce Department now has an undersecretary and one assistant secretary for air. Wallace told Senators, the three proposed new assistants would be assigned respectively to international trade, domestic trade and small business problems.

Wallace also backed a bill by Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.), to establish an office of technical services under the Commerce Department. The office would be headed by a $10,000-a-year director.

The Fulbright measure seeks to "stimulate and encourage technological research and development activities and their application to business, industry and commerce."

Hungarian Oil Delay by Reds Vexes Acheson

Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson yesterday expressed dissatisfaction at the pace of negotiations with Russian officials regarding operations of Hungarian oil fields owned by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

He told a news conference that American diplomatic representatives are now discussing with Soviet officials, who have seized the Lispe oil field, the question of how much production could be expected from the area.

Acheson said negotiations with the Russians are not going as fast as the United States would like.

Press reports from Budapest have said the Russians are unwilling to let Standard Oil operate the Lispe fields because they believe the company's development technique is 25 years behind the times. The company has defended its projected operating program as efficient, and in the interest of conserving the oil reserve.

The Russians are paying for the oil after delivering it to Standard's refineries.

Acheson said the State Department is receiving reports on the situation from H. F. A. Schoenfeld, American diplomatic representative to Hungary, and is keeping in constant touch on the situation.

Acheson said the fields were taken over and operated by the Hungarian government in 1941 after Hungary's declaration of war against the United States.

After the Allies went into Hungary, the United States took up from time to time with the Allied control council the question of readmitting Standard Oil officials to the property. Some of them were, Acheson said.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Kilgore Group Members' List To Receive Nazi

By the United Press

The Senate Kilgore Committee investigating United States foreign economic policy soon will receive the Nazi Party's card index listing of 80,000 party members in this country and South America, it was reported last night.

The list, captured in Frankfurt, is being studied by a special four-power military commission in Berlin. The names, comprising membership of the Nazi world-wide "Ausland Organization," are being photographed on microfilm for shipment.

First Names Due February 1

Brig. Gen. Donald P. Booth, special assistant to the Undersecretary of War, informed the committee that the first 2000 names will arrive here February 1. Additional names will be forthcoming every two weeks until May.

Booth explained in a letter that the shortage of trained personnel in Germany had slowed compilation of the lists and that the data is under study by United States, Soviet, British, and French occupying forces.

A committee spokesman said the FBI would be given opportunity to study the lists and will be consulted before any names are released.

The committee spokesman said some of the listed names would be people prominent in German-American affairs in New York City, Chicago and Milwaukee.

Will Call Braden

It also was revealed that the committee plans to call Assistant Secretary of State J. Spruille Braden next week for a review of State Department policy on checking reported infiltrations of German personnel and foreign assets into South America since VE-Day.

Committee Chairman Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), said that Braden would be asked to give the latest available information concerning "German economic penetration in South America," and to review any progress made in stopping the thrust.

Legion of Merit Awarded to Gen. Pfeiffer

Brig. Gen. Omar T. Pfeiffer, USMC, of Route 2, Rockville, Md., has been awarded the Legion of Merit for "outstanding services" in the Pacific from 1943 to 1945, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The medal was presented by Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marine Corps, in a ceremony at Marine Corps Headquarters here.

Gen. Pfeiffer, a native of St. Paul, Minn., was staff officer to the Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet during the two-year period. He received a Bronze Star medal a year ago for similar services from 1941 to 1943.

Bronze Star medals were awarded two Army nurses now on duty at Ft. Belvoir Hospital, for Pacific service. They are:

Maj. Beulah Schloemer, of West Bend, Wis., former principal chief nurse with the 204th General Hospital, on Guam; Lieut. Bernice M. Kardys, of Chelmsford, Mass., who served aboard a hospital ship evacuating patients from Pacific islands to New Guinea.

Action Asked by May 1 to Settle Presidential Succession Issue

By the Associated Press

A proposal for a joint Congressional study of the question of Presidential succession was approved unanimously yesterday by the Senate Elections Committee.

The resolution, offered by Chairman Green (D., R. I.) provides for a committee of 10—five from each chamber—to make the study and recommend legislation by May 1.

The committee's action sent the resolution to the Senate. After consideration there, it must go to the House, which already has approved succession legislation requested by President Truman.

Green said the proposed study would cover the entire question of Presidential succession from the time a man is nominated for President or vice president until he completes his term.

"In these days of the atomic bomb it is possible that the President, vice president and the entire line of succession might be wiped out in one strike," Green added. "This joint committee should look into all angles so there will be absolutely no uncertainty about this."

Since President Truman succeeded to the Presidency from the vice presidency, the Secretary of State and other Cabinet members are next in line for the Presidency under present law.

Legislation proposed by Mr. Truman and approved by the House designates the speaker of the House, the President pro tempore of the Senate and Cabinet members in that order as Presidential successors.

Truman Names Parkhurst To Ship Board

By the Associated Press

President Truman yesterday nominated Richard Parkhurst of Massachusetts to be a member of the United State Maritime Commission.

Parkhurst, a Republican and a member of the Boston Port Authority, was named to succeed Vice Admiral Howard L. Vickery, resigned. He would serve for Vickery's unexpired term of six years which began April 16, 1942.

The President also sent to the Senate the nomination of Clarence M. Young of California to be a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board for the term expiring December 31, 1946, succeeding Edward P. Warner.

Senator White (R. Me.) who called at the White House earlier in the day told reporters on leaving that he hoped the President would name "a couple of Republicans" to existing vacancies on the Maritime Commission.

Randolph to Seek Continued Use of Baker Hospital

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Congressman Jennings Randolph of the Second West Virginia District said while on a visit here yesterday that he was exercising all possible means to have the Army's Newton D. Baker General Hospital here continued in use.

The hospital, which has about 2200 beds and has carried at its peak about 3800 combat-wounded patients, has been included by the Army in a list of 60-odd hospitals which it expects to declare as not necessary to its hospitalization program by the middle of the present year. The hospital executives and local agencies have been importuning him ever since the Army intention was disclosed to find a continuing use for the facility. It represents an investment of something over five million dollars and has been in use for more than two years.

He said he had called the situation to the attention personally and directly of Gen. Omar Bradley, VA head, and was also using other means to make certain that it not be dismissed as "simply another hospital."

24 GIs 'Rescued' Off Straying Ship By Coast Guard

Miami, Fla., Jan. 21.—Twenty-four home-hungry ETO veterans were "rescued" from a wandering ship and landed at Miami today after they dispatched an urgent message to Coast Guard headquarters here.

Out of Barry, Wales, aboard the freighter Thomas J. Jarvis, the men thought they were en route to New York. At sea their ship was diverted to New Orleans and yesterday, off Florida, new orders came sending the ship to Galveston.

The veterans decided that because their orders directed them to proceed to "a port of debarkation," they would be within their regulations if they called upon the Coast Guard for help.

Coast Guard headquarters here sent an 83-foot cutter to meet the ship off the sea buoy.

'You Touched Me' Is Comedy Of Substance at the National

By Nelson B. Bell

A pretty war of deeply ingrained traits of character, rather than wits is waged in "You Touched Me!" the romantic comedy by Tennessee Williams and Donald Windham, which last night inaugurated a single week's engagement in the National Theater.

In contriving the three acts and six scenes of their play, suggested by a short story by D. H. Lawrence, the authors have found need for no more than seven characters to frame a bitter, but none the less amusing, conflict between the evil lurking in those who pretend to be good, and the good not too deeply buried under the seeming evils of their adversaries.

The action is confined to the living room in a house in rural England occupied by Cornelius Rockley, a retired sea captain, his spinster sister, Emmie; his daughter, Matilda, and their maid, Phoebe. As the play opens and progresses through its early periods, the menage is dominated with an austere and disturbing finality by Miss Emmie.

With the newly appointed rector of the parish as a staunch ally, and possible escape from her state of single blessedness, Emmie utilizes her brother's taste for strong drink as an instrument of his own subjugation and a frightened submission to a complete and unnatural mental and physical isolation from the outside world on Matilda's confused and intangibly rebellious part.

Romance's Four Freedoms

With the return of Hadrian, the captain's adopted "charity boy," as a leftenant in the air force, on a brief furlough from the wars, the opposing factions are evened in numbers and the issue substantially and belligerently joined for a joust that multiplies both interest and amusement as the tables gradually turn in favor of the masculine advocacy of liberation of romance's four freedoms—freedom of spirit, thought, action and the sort of self-determination that keeps strong blood strains alive and relegates loveless immolation to an eternal limbo.

The largely conversational thesis that there is a future to be looked to in every life, particularly in the lives of the young, is given variety and movement by the adroit manner in which the piece has been staged. The captain's private cabin, off a landing from the living room, stairway leading from the front door of the dwelling to a balcony above, from which open two invisible sleeping apartments—"space stage," I belive is the technical name for it—afford ample scope for sufficient action to relieve the play of the stigma of "conversation piece."

There are, nevertheless, frequent passages in the three acts when the "inevitability" of much of what occurs seems to have been subordinated to the mechanics of a play that does not always ring true.

The returned prodigal, who has always been a disturbing influence in the household to everyone but his foster-father, reveals an occasional philosophical bent and erudition that are as surprising to the audience as to the members of the family who cannot quite comprehend his sudden metamorphosis, or that his irritating qualities always had sprung from gentle impulses and a deep self-consciousness never understood by those around him.

This vital aspect of the comedy has been left underdeveloped and is sprung upon those on both sides of the footlights with too little preparation for fullest dramatic effect—a defect that diminishes as the play approaches its most telling climactic intervals.

The forcefulness of developments is measured no less by the gradual emancipation of the captain from the scorn in which he and his bottles have been held than by the slow awakening of Matilda and Hadrian to the realization that each is the complete answer to all of the problems of the other.

This eventuates a little more slowly than it should in a comedy dedicated to light romantic entertainment.

Guthrie McClintic, in association with Lee Shubert, has chosen wisely in his selection of players to appear in Edmund Gwenn's support, and has directed with a full appreciation of the possibilities of Motley's clever setting, perfectly in tune with the play with its minutely detailed appointments.

Finely Balanced Cast

Mr. Gwenn portrays the bibulous Captain Rockley in antic spirit and with a wide play of expressive and resourceful touches that throw his scenes of most serious import into high relief. This is not Washington's first opportunity to observe the skill with which he is able to assume the idiosycrasies of the habitual tippler, nor its first encounter with his ability to display both tenderness and power as occasion may demand. He does both with the expertness of a distinguished veteran.

As Emmie, Catherine Willard affords the star flawless support in an unpleasantly vindictive role which she portrays with an admirable indifference to sympathetic appeal. One hopes constantly, and not futilely, as it turns out, for her utter undoing.

John Conway, as Hadrian, and Phyllis Ryder, Matilda, perform intelligently and as convincingly as the authors have permitted in their shaping of characters that at times seem just a shade incomprehensible in their reactions to life and each other.

Truman May Take Brief Florida Vacation

The White House said yesterday that President Truman may take a short vacation in Florida next month, but declined to give any specific dates or location. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said plans are still "quite tentative."

He said he knew of no plan for Mr. Truman to meet with former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, spending a six-week vacation in Miami. Churchill will fly here after his vacation, however, and go with Mr. Truman to Fulton, Mo., where the former will speak at Westminster College, March 5.

Leo Brady-Walter Ker Playwriting Team Back Together at Catholic U.

HIGH PROMISE is held out to both the local theater and the Broadway stage by the announcement that Washington's most successful playwriting team has been reunited in the Speech and Drama Department at Catholic University.

Angela Lansbury

Leo Brady, recently released from the Army, has been appointed to the drama faculty, where he will be associated with Walter Kerr in the training of writers for the stage.

Washington theatergoers will recall their first collaborative effort in 1939, "Yankee Doodle Boy," the first musical biography of the late George M. Cohan.

This was followed by "Cook Book," a similar life story of Joe Cook. Brady played the Cook role in the University Theater production and later appeared in person in a week's headline engagement at the Earle Theater.

The third musical from the team's joint typewriter—each may have had one for all I know—"Count Me In," found its way to Broadway with Charlie Butterworth as star.

In the field of serious drama, Brady and Kerr earned high praise for their adaptation of the stage of Graham Greene's "Brighton Rock," which they undertook at the urgent behest of Producer Lester Cowan, of Ernie Pyle's "Story of GI Joe" fame.

On His Own

Brady's individually written plays include "Star on the Dood," "Calidore," "One Punch Judy," "Brother Orchid"—afterward played in a slightly different version by Edward G. Robinson—and "Likely Story," last year's musical at C. U. with tunes by Sparty Donato, now in contemplation for Broadway use.

During his three years in uniform, Master Sergt. Brady spent recruiting in Philadelphia. He wrote some 200 scripts, including a series of "guest star" shows featuring Helen Hayes, Boris Karloff, Mary Astor, Cleste Holm, Gene Lockhart, Sidney Blackmer, Lon McCallister, Canada Lee, Constance Cummings, Ethel Waters, Hugh Franklin, Maxine Sullivan, Ilona Massey and Bela Lugosi.

Brady's first civilian dramatic chore will be the role of Sherlock Holmes in the Speech and Drama Department's revival of the William Gillette play.

Wonder if the boys have it in mind to get together on something that might be called "State of Reunion"?

Now that the thing is really rolling, names are being added right and left to the list of Hollywood stars coming to the Capital for the Roosevelt Birthday Celebration. Paul Henreid, from Warner Brothers; Angela Lansbury, from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Band Leader Charlie Spivak are the latest entries. Paul Henreid was most recently seen as star of "The Spanish Main," RKO-Radio's Technicolor thunderbolt of piracy. Miss Lansbury will be remembered as the pitiful little singer in the dingy pub in "The Picture of Dorian Gray" and will be seen even more advantageously as Em, queen of the honky-tonk girls, in "The Harvey Girls," opening tomorrow at Loew's Capitol. So that makes six—Van Johnson, Alexis Smith and Eddie Bracken having been previously announced. A total of 25 or so is expected.

The visiting stars will be honored January 29 at a Roosevelt Birthday Dinner at the Mayflower. Following this they will also make appearances at Uline's Arena and the hotels holding Birthday Dances.

A Slight Improvement

By no means "bustin' out all over," there still will be more new pictures on view this weekend than last, when the number reached an almost irreducible minimum.

Tomorrow, "Kiss and Tell," Columbia's picturization of the stage hit, will take over the screen at the Earle Theater, with Shirley Temple in the stellar role.

Offering Technicolor competition at Loew's Capitol will be M-G-M's "The Harvey Girls," which makes no great effort to adhere to the Samuel Hopkins Adams story. It takes the form of a rollicking musical Western with Judy Garland, Angela Lansbury, Marjorie Main, John Hodiak, Preston oster, Ray Bolger and Kenny Baker in the top spots.

That seemingly imperishable classic, "The Informer," and Walt Disney's "Saludos Amigos" comprise the double-feature opening this morning at the Little Theater, and "They Were Expendable" will be popping up again tomorrow at the Columbia, with Robert Montgomery, Donna Reed and John Wayne costarred. It is worth remembering that Victor McLaglen's performance in "The Informer" won him the Academy Award.

"Leave Her to Heaven," at the Palace; "The Bells of St. Mary's," going into its fifth capacity week at RKO-Keith's, and "San Antonio," at the Metropolitan, all are holding over.

"Spellbound," David O. Selznick's International production, directed by Alfred Hitchcock with Ingrid Bergman and Gregory Peck as costars, was voted the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award by the National Screen Council as the best picture for family consumption released in December. It is scheduled to follow "Leave Her to Heaven" at Loew's Palace. "The Southerner" was runner-up, with "What Next, Corporal Hargrove?" "And Then There Were None" and "Blithe Spirit" scoring honorable mentions.

Don't-You-Believe-It Note

There is probably no foundation for the suspicion that the weather these past few days has been an advance ballyhoo for "Windy Hill!"

Broadway Bulletins

New York, Jan. 22.—The Senate Committee on Education and Labor will call the heads of the automobile and steel companies to testify regarding the tax rebates to which these companies would be entitled if their earnings are reduced by the current strikes . . . Bernard Baruch is working on plans to ease the current industrial crisis. . . . Every cell and hotel room in which the Nazi criminals were confined, from the first day of capture, was wired by the Army. Every word spoken or whispered among themselves has been recorded . . . The reprofiled Milton Berle saw George Jessel at the Carnival, and asked: "What're you doing with my old nose?"

Bernard Baruch

The Pearl Harbor Investigating Committee already is working on its preliminary report, although the full testimony isn't in. . . . Bing Crosby, whose next picture will be for Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, received a phone call from Wilder, who asked: "How would you like Joan Fontaine for your leading lady?" Crosby, with faith in the Brackett and Wilder team, answered: "It doesn't matter. Just tell me when and where I'm to show up, and if you want me fat or skinny?" . . . The LaGuardia-Newspaper Guild rift soon will be healed and Fiorello will be admitted to membership.

Will Davis studied front pages and told of the day when John L. Lewis was preparing to call a strike of his mine workers. Roosevelt asked Davis and Jimmy Byrnes to find a solution. Byrnes suggested that the President broadcast an appeal to the miners to disregard Lewis and remain at their jobs . . . "Not so long ago Lewis asked his miners to vote for me. They figured that I know more about politics than Lewis does. And by the same token, if I appeal to them not to listen to Lewis about striking, they'll figure that John knows more about the miners' plight than I do. So I've decided not to do it."

When Beatrice Lillie arrived at LaGuardia Field she was asked the reason for her coming. "I came here to mail a letter," she explained. "I found I couldn't cable, because of the strike" . . . Judith Evelyn has been signed for the road company of "State of the Union" . . . Because of the budget restrictions, and because his low salary would not permit of such expenditure, J. Edgar Hoover couldn't get a car for his own use. Two friends, one in New York and one in Washington, offered to present him with limousines. But Hoover said he couldn't accept such gifts. Both men therefore "sold" their cars to the United States Government for $1 each. And these are the Government-owned cars which the FBI director now uses in Washington and New York.

Bing Crosby tells of driving with Robert Benchley across a toll-bridge where the cop on duty was impolite. Twice they drove across the bridge, and each time the cop was surly when Benchley gave him the 25-cent fee . . . The third time, when the cop reached for Benchley's 25 cents, the coin could not be dislodged from Benchley's hand. In fact, the whole arm—it was a prop—came off. Benchley drove off, leaving cop holding the 25 cents and the arm . . . But the cop's whistle forced Benchley back. "Wise guy, eh?" snarled the cop . . . Benchley took the arm back, shook his head and said: "Y'know, officer—I never missed it."

The Kaiser-Frazer Co. flew some film stars from Hollywood to New York to glamourize the premier showing of their new car at the Waldorf . . . La Guardia will stop off at Puerto Rico, on his way to the inauguration ceremonies at Rio . . . At a dinner for L. B. Mayer, Neil McCarthy lauded the film executive-racing man for spending $50,000 to buy a 2-year-old. "That's nothing," said George Jessel, "Lois Andrews cost me more, and she was younger than Busher" . . . Jessel, incidentally, complained to John Steinbeck in the Stork: "It took me 19 hours to fly from the Coast. We were about 5 hours late." Steinbeck was unsympathetic. He said: "It took my grandmother 18 months to cross the country. She made it by wagon and foot."

Lou Walters, owner of the Latin Quarter, went to Hollywood where he tried to interest Jack Haley in a New York revue he was planning to produce. "Who'll write the sketches?" Haley asked. Walter said, "Oh, I'll probably write most of them" . . . Haley pointed through the window and said: "See that office building on the corner? I own it. See that food market down the street? I own that, too. I also own the manicure shop over there, that department store and half the hotel. See that bank? I've got $200,000 on deposit there. And I've accumulated all of that," said Haley, "so that you won't write sketches for me."

Joe Frisco saw a heavily-bearded sailor, just in from two years in the Pacific. "Ain't that n-n-ice," said Frisco, "Lincoln's son j-j-joined the Navy" . . . Not a single case of enemy sabotage in this hemisphere was reported during the war, because of the FBI's vigilance in every country throughout Latin and South America. But when the World Intelligence plans proposed by the War Department and the State Department go through, the FBI's jurisdiction will cease and its agents will have to be withdrawn from all countries outside the U. S. A. . . . Orson Welles' choice for the leading role in his musical is Alan Mowbray.

During the early stages of the war John Steinbeck conceived a plan to distribute counterfeit money, realistically aged, throughout the Reich. This project, which would have cost the equivalent of the price of one destroyer, might have paralyzed the Nazis' economy. The President suggested that Steinbeck discuss it with Morgenthau . . . The Secretary of the Treasury said: "No, we can't do that. I put people in jail for counterfeiting" . . . "We also put people in jail for killing," Steinbeck replied, "but that's what they're doing on the other side" . . . Morgenthau ruled against it.

Black-Market Warning Sent Slaughterers

OPA yesterday notified 34 Eastern and Midwestern slaughterers it plans immediate investigation of their meat transactions as part of an "intensified drive to reduce black market sales."

Asserting black market conditions have been "aggravated" by the strike of packing house workers, the agency described telegraphed warning to certain slaughterers not affected by the work stoppage as "the first of a series of daily actions of the same type."

These warnings, OPA said, are based upon records of purchases of live cattle made in Chicago by slaughterers from all parts of the country.

The agency said that a close check on these purchases indicates which slaughterers are buying large shipments of cattle at or near the legal overriding ceiling price of $18 100 pounds.

Cites Profit Necessity

"A slaughterer who consistently buys cattle at that high figure," OPA said, "would in all probability have to sell the dressed meat at above-ceiling prices to realize a profit on his purchases."

The agency said that by use of telegraphed warnings and investigation of purchases and sales "made at suspiciously high prices," it hopes to forestall sale of meat to the public at black market prices.

Telegrams dispatched by OPA noted the number of cattle purchased and the amount paid by individual slaughterers.

"Inasmuch as continued purchases of live cattle at these prices makes compliance . . . unlikely," the telegram continued, "our district office will investigate your live cattle purchase records as well as your sales of meat.

"In the event violation is shown, appropriate court sanction will be imposed, together with withholding of all subsidy payments during periods of violation. You are also advised that any manipulation of live cattle costs for the purpose of inducing payment of subsidies will be subject to all the penalties provided."

Names Not Disclosed

OPA did not disclose names of slaughterers to whom telegrams were sent, but said they are located in these cities:

Philadelphia; Newark, N. J.; Rochester, N. Y.; Newcastle, Pa.; Cleveland; Canton, Ohio; Mount Fostoria, Ohio; Akron, Ohio; Carteret, N. J.; Somerville, Mass.; Trenton, N. J.

Clark Among 11 Nominated Major General

By the Associated Press

Mark W. Clark, recently assailed by a veterans' group because of a costly battle in the Italian campaign was nominated yesterday for the permanent rank of major general by President Truman.

The names of ten other well-known wartime leaders were sent to the Senate for promotion to the same permanent rank.

The nominees include six who were full generals under temporary wartime ranking: Courtney Hicks Hodges, Jacob Loucks Devers, George Churchill Kenney, Carl Spaatz, Thomas Troy Handy and Clark.

Four others were temporary lieutenant generals: Ira Clarence Eaker, Robert Lawrence Eichelberger, Walter Bedell Smith and Robert Charlwood Richardson, jr.

Maj. Gen. Thomas Bernard Larkin was nominated to that rank permanently and for appointment as quartermaster general. He would serve a four-year period succeeding Lieut. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory.

Brig. Gen. Thomas Jefferson Davis was nominated for that rank permanently and as assistant to the quartermaster general for four years.

Mr. Truman promoted 23 temporary lieutenant generals and three major generals to the permanent rank of brigadier general.

Clark was criticized in a resolution adopted Saturday at Brownwood, Tex., by members of the Thirty-sixth Division Association calling for congressional investigation of the Rapido River crossing in January, 1944. A War Department spokesman defended the engagement as diversionary to permit the Anzio beachhead assault.

The resolution urged "steps to correct a military system that will permit an inefficient and inexperienced officer, such as Gen. Mark W. Clark, in a high command to destroy the young manhood of this country . . ." The Army spokesman said Clark was ordered by Fifteenth Army Group Headquarters to make the attack. Clark, who is in Europe, has declined comment.

Boy's Bomb Thesis Floors Most Readers

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Nine-year-old Jimmy Seawright wrote a 25-page thessi on the atomic bomb which he wanted published "for kids like me." But it developed today that only nuclear physicists and Jimmy fully understood the second chapter of his work.

Jimmy's mother is proud of her brilian boy, but she confessed that his questions in the realm of science had her buffaloed.

The book written by the boy is just a thing little Jimmy knocked off when he was not touring classrooms at Jackson Grade School making speeches. The first chapter makes sense to almost anyone. It begins:

"Over the inter-communication system a man began speaking: Minus 25 . . . minus 20 . . . minus 10 . . . minus 5 . . . minus 1. A man pressed a button and the atomic age was born. The force of the second atomic bomb completely wiped Hiroshima off the face of the earth and 166,096 Japs with it.

Then the Plot Thickens

Chapter two is a bit confusing to all but profesors and Jimmy.

In this he diagrams and tells the history of atomic energy and explains the first atomic theories in terms used by Sir Isaac Newton and John Dalton.

However, readers his own age understand what happens between the time an atomic bomb falls from a plane and hits its objective, because tiny Jimmy drew some lines. He named these lines and explained in nothing flat what should be known about radar breaking a tube of acid, the acid eating away a lead container of beryllium, the beryllium releasing a stream of neutrons, the neutrons hitting uranium and the uranium causing an explosion.

Generally Called Nice Guy

Jimmy is generally classed as a "nice guy" by the other kids and they don't take up the cry of "smartie" when he's around, because—after all—he's helping to build a tree-house in his spare time, too.

The youngster is in the fifth grade now and his grades are the best, naturally. He spends his Saturday mornings appearing as a juvenile expert on a hometown radio program.

At home Jimmy reads textbooks on physics, chemistry and atomic energy. He wants to grow up to be a n-u-c-l-e-a-r p-h-y-s-i-c-i-s-t when he grows up.

Potomac Basin Fund Reduced By House Unit

The Potomac River Basin Commission's plan to double its work against stream pollution next year was stalemated yesterday by the House Appropriations' Committee refusal to approve a $10,000 Federal contribution.

In reporting out a 5½ billion dollar independent offices appropriation bill, the House committee alloted a $5000 contribution. Commission officials had originally asked for $12,600, but Federal Budget Bureau reduced the request to $10,000.

A fact-finding body to coordinate anti-pollution work in the Potomac Basin, the commission is composed of representatives from the District, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the Federal Government. The states have always supplied funds to the commission, but this year the Federal Government was asked to chip in for the first time with about 35 per cent of the expenses.

Harold Sothoron, State Senator from Maryland and chairman of the Potomac River Basin Commission, said the House committee action will slow down work which should be twice as aggressive next year now that many wartime restrictions on construction are ended.

Norman, Okla.—University of Oklahoma officials recently reported that more than 450 war veterans had enrolled at the school, an increase of 400 per cent over last year. A total of 189 veteran seeking entrance have been processed recently.

Country Trade Group Plans National Body

The Prince Georges County Trade Association yesterday made plans to promote the formation of national and State-wide associations of small businessmen's groups.

Frank B. Smith, member of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, was named chairman of the new national organization committee created at the association meeting Monday night at the Riverdale Municipal Hall.

The first step, Smith said, will be to contact groups in nearby sections.

Directors elected for two-year terms are Thomas M. Hoffmeister, Laurel; Marvin Gallimore, Bladensburg; Paul A. Sellers, Riverdale; Andrew J. Tackitt, Colmar Manor; Dewey Freeman, Silver Hill; Bert Freideman, Mount Rainier; Russell Travers, College Park, and John O'Hara, Brentwood.

The directors will meet February 4 at 3119 Parkway rd., Cheverly, to nominate officers. Election will be held February 18.

On motion of Thomas E. Freeman, commander of the county council, American Legion, the association voted to ask the United States Employment Service to arrange with the Veterans' Administration to five final approval to business firms employing veterans who are learning trades under the GI Bill of Rights. Freeman said the present method of certifying veterans, which requires State Board of Education approval, has delayed many veterans in getting their supplementary wages from the Government.

Andrew Tackitt appealed for additional volunteers to operate the photostat machines in the Hyattsville and Upper Marlboro veterans' aid centers. The machines are used to record discharge papers.

Fredericksburg Airport Permit is Sought

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—The Richmond School of Aviation today applied to the State Corporation Commission for authority to establish an airport in the Fredericksburg area.

The SCC scheduled a hearing on the application for 10 a. m. February 7.

The Richmond aviation concern and operate an airport 1¼ miles proposed in its application to build northwest of Fredericksburg on the south side of State Route 639 on land known as Curtis farm. The field would be known as "Fredericksburg Airport."

Dial Phone Revealed For Use in Automobiles

New York, Jan. 21.—A dial telephone system installed in an automobile, making it possible for the driver to call his home or friends in another automobile, will be demonstrated here Thursday and Friday for members of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

The dial system is said to work within a range of 50 miles.

Church Urged To Bar Flood of Communism

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP).—The "restoration of religious life" in central Europe was urged today by Dr. Edgar Rees Tulloss, president of the National Lutheran Council, as "the one means of avoiding a world-wide sweep of communism."

An effort at such restoration should be undertaken "for American self-interest if nothing else," Dr. Tulloss, president of Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, told the council's twenty-eighth annual meeting.

"Economic stagnation and spiritual paralysis in central Europe endanger the well-being of the world," he said. "Democracy was born of religion and cannot endure without it. Unless we can restore church activity throughout Europe as a bulwark of democratic thought, we can expect nothing less than a world-wide sweep of communism."

The National Lutheran Council currently is campaigning to raise 10 million dollars for religious rehabilitation overseas.

Tavenner to Leave In Month for Japan

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Frank S. Tavenner, jr., of Woodstock, United States attorney for the western district of Virginia, said today it probably will be at least a month before he leaves for Japan, to serve as a member of the special legal staff prosecuting Japanese war criminals.

During his absence, his work will be done by Howard C. Gilmer, jr., of Pulaski, first assistant district attorney. R. Roy Rush of Roanoke, second assistant, will take over Gilmer's duties.

A 3-year enlistment in the Regular Army now entitles American young men to a

FULL COLLEGE COURSE

or a Business or Trade School Education

By Act of Congress, benefits of the GI Bill of Rights are open to every qualified young man who enlists in the new Regular Army before October 6, 1946

HUNDREDS of thousands of intelligent young men finishing high school have been unable to afford a higher education. Now they can have it, free.

GREATEST EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY IN HISTORY

Under the GI Bill of Rights every young man who enlists in the Regular Army before October 6, 1946, is entitled, after discharge, to education or training in the school or college of his selection at Government expense. For a period based on the length of his service, the Government will pay his tuition, up to $500 per ordinary school year, plus $65 monthly for living expenses—$90 if he is married. After a 3-year enlistment, for example, he may have 48 months of education, with a total of $5120 paid by the Government!

Original enlistments are open to men aged 17 to 34, and may be for 1½, 2 or 3 years.

The Army itself is one of the world's best schools. Thorough training in one or more of 200 skills, trades and technical subjects is open to every soldier.

If you are 17 or over, and mentally and physically fit, you can earn while you learn in the Army. You'll get good pay, food, clothing, quarters and medical care. You'll get a 30-day paid furlough each year. If you enlist for 3 years you can choose your branch of service and overseas theater in the Air, Ground or Service Forces.

Since the new peacetime Army will use the most modern scientific equipment, many technical grades will be open, with higher pay and rapid advancement.

Emancipation

President Truman is a most welcome agitator in the movement for emancipation of the District of Columbian. "We should move," he declared, speaking to the Nation which since 1800 has held the people of this community in thrall, "toward a greater measure of self-government consistent with the constitutional status of the District. We should take adequate steps to assure that citizens of the United States are not denied their franchise merely because they reside at the Nation's Capital."

Perhaps the eloquence of this appeal and the prestige of the President's office will move the tyrants who rule us. Perhaps now, of their own volition, they will act to strike off our fetters, to admit us into full fellowship in the society we have so long and faithfully supported. Perhaps, at last, they will choose to end a bondage no less degrading to those who impose it than to those who suffer under it. We hope so. We hope that the President's appeal has come in time and that it will not fall upon ears grown deaf through arrogance.

Let them not think, because we have been so long supine, that we are incapable of action. Prudence dictates that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evidence a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of this colony.

Let them remember from whom we are descended. Perhaps it would refresh their recollection if on some dark night a band of citizens, disguised in the habiliments of those aborigines who long ago trod this soil as free men, were to descend upon some ship at anchor in the harbor and dump its cargo into the Potomac. We do not urge violence—save if peaceful petition be again rejected. Let them take heed, however. Let them know that we mean to have freedom—within the Union, if we may, through independence, if we must.

Whose White House?

The other evening Mr. Lorenzo S. Winslow, the architect, made a radio address defending the proposed $1,650,000 addition to the White House as designed by himself and approved by the Commission of Fine Arts. Mr. Winslow's argument was, as we take it, in answer to points raised in an editorial on this page January 19. We said we had been unable to find any historical evidence that the White House was ever intended to be anything more than the residence of the President of the United States and his family. This was disputed by Mr. Winslow, who said that until the incumbency of the late Theodore Roosevelt, "no President had occupied more than about five to six rooms on the second floor as family living quarters"; indeed, he continued, "the White House was much more an office building than a home for the President." Theodore Roosevelt, it will be recalled, had a large family, and the inadequacy of the living quarters on the second story led to the extensive renovations of 1902.

However, the fact that certain Presidents may have chosen to consider the White House primarily as an office and only secondarily as a residence by no means proves that this was the intention of the people and Congress who provided the building. It was certainly not the intention of the original architect, James Hoban, as is proved by the very design of the building. To the point that it would meet the necessities of the White House clerical staff if the executive offices were to take over the present quarters of the Department of State, or if a new office building for them were built somewhere in the vicinity, Mr. Winslow simply answers that because the President has "the most difficult job in the world, he should at least be at liberty to keep his offices close to his house if he prefers to do so." This is as much as to say that the President has the right to make whatever alterations to the White House he may choose to make.

We dislike to bring the matter up, but the fact is that the White House is not the President's property. Indeed, the President's lease may be a very short one. So it seems to us that before any project so destructive of the architectural harmony of so beautiful an edifice is undertaken, something more than the mere approval of the Commission of Fine Arts should be necessary. The appropriation which has made it possible for Messrs. Truman and Winslow to proceed with their plans for the mutilation of the White House, despite a growing popular opposition, was originally part of an appropriation for the Department of the Interior. But, as far as we know, neither Mr. Ickes nor the Park and Planning Commission has been so much as consulted in the matter.

Gaullist Gamble

The resignation of General de Gaulle, as president pro tempore of the new French Republic, need not yet be taken as final, despite the word "irrevocable" used by his secretary, and despite the announcement about "retirement from politics." Circumstances are conceivable under which it might be withdrawn, and one of these would be the unwillingness or inability of the Socialists and Communists to agree upon a new government to replace the three-party government formed after the October elections. The disagreement between De Gaulle and the Left parties on the question of the army budget appears to have been mainly a pretext chosen by the general to force a showdown with the Left parties on the question of the new French constitution. The constitutional clause concerning executive powers, as drafted by the committee, would give the Assembly, rather than the President, the power of choosing prime ministers. De Gaulle, however, has insisted that all executive powers be vested in a president, governing by a mandate from the people.

Obviously, the desire of the Assembly to keep all possible powers in its own hands is dictated by a fear that the presidency might again be used as a stepping stone to autocracy, as it was by Louis Napoleon after the famous election of 1848. This explains why, under the constitution of the Third Republic, the president was reduced to the status of a figurehead and deprived of all save symbolic functions. De Gaulle and his supporters, however, argue that the later years of the Third Republic prove the impracticability of a purely parliamentary government in times of crisis. Under the conditions now existing in France and in the world, they insist, such a government would be doomed in advance to failure.

There is no doubt that in forcing a showdown on this question, General de Gaulle has been gambling with his own political destiny. He has, however, succeeded in placing his Socialist opponents between the horns of a difficult dilemma. They must now decide whether to collaborate with the Communists in the organization of a new government or to retreat from their position on the constitutional question. As the result of the October elections, the Communists, who in France, as elsewhere, vote always as a unit, have the largest group of seats in the Constituent Assembly. They are therefore in a position to dominate any Left coalition government that might be formed, and at first proposed their leader Maurice Thorez as provisional president to succeed De Faulle. The Socialists themselves have proposed Felix Gouin, now president of the Constituent Assembly. It is possible that the parties which have been supporting De Gaulle might be induced to participate in a government headed by M. Gouin; it is inconceivable that they would join a government headed by M. Thorez.

The mutual jealousy and distrust between orthodox (Second International) Socialists and the Communists is perhaps not as pronounced in France as in some other countries, but nevertheless it exists. Moreover, in the trade-union field, where they have always had their greatest strength, the Socialists have been gradually losing ground to the Communists. A decision to accept responsibility for the actions of a government dominated by the Communists might well lead to the eclipse of the Socialists as an important political party.

The third important party in France is the new Mouvement Republicaine Populaire. In the Assembly it is slightly outnumbered by the Communists, but in the recent elections ran ahead of the Communists in the total votes cast for its candidates. Its great strength is, of course, in the departements, and it is representative mainly of democratic Catholic influences. A correspondent of the New York Daily Worker has described it, in the Communist Party vocabularly, as a "motley crew of reactionaries, clericals, pink-spectacled liberals and political adventurers." It has been steadily supporting De Gaulle, and it is said that his decision to resign was taken at the advice of the leaders of the MRP.

It will be recalled that when General de Gaulle last November forced a showdown with the Communists over their demand for cabinet posts that would have given them control of the army, the police or of diplomacy, the Socialists, after much hesitation, joined with MRP to support him. They may do so again, in spite of their misgivings about General de Gaulle's ultimate intentions, rather than let the power go by default to the Communists. If they do not, we may take it for granted that De Gaulle's gamble has failed.

Controlling Thought

The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee is an organization of responsible American citizens licensed by the President's War Relief Control Board to collect funds in the United States for the relief of refugee victims of Fascism abroad. Among its activities is the maintenance of a hospital at Toulouse for those most pitiful and abandoned of all refugees, the Spanish Republicans exiled from their own country because Fascism is still triumphant there. In helping these people, the committee is wholly consistent with the position of the United States Government, which has already agreed to discuss with France and Britain the severance of diplomatic relations with Franco Spain.

Obviously, then, according to the logic which has been consistently pursued by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, this organization for the relief of anti-Fascist refugees is un-American. It is as plain, is it not, as the un-Americanism of Shirley Temple's dimples? The organization has therefore been subpenaed to produce all its books and records before the Un-American Activities Committee this very morning at 10 o'clock. And prior to this "investigation," the committee asked the War Control Board to cancel the organization's license to collect and distribute funds.

This is in no sense an isolated case. The other day another reputable organization, the National Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism, received a letter signed by one Ernie Adamson, the Un-American Activities Committee's chief counsel. "I have received a copy of a formal petition being distributed by you," the letter began, "together with solicitation of money for the purpose of controlling the thoughts of American citizens." It has become un-American, apparently, in the view of the Un-American Activities Committee, for men to enter into voluntary associations to advance their common purposes or even to petition Congress for redress of their grievances. If the Committee to Combat Anti-Semitism is attempting to control the thoughts of American citizens, then so is the Antisaloon League, the Republican Party, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and every other group which, in the free tradition of America, is seeking to secure acceptance of its views by a free people. There is a danger of "controlling the thoughts of American citizens" only from those like the Un-American Activities Committee who would suppress the free expression of ideas.

We say again that this Un-American Activities Committee, acting as it does under the authority and sponsorship of the House of Representatives, casts an ugly stain upon the integrity and the good name of Congress. It undermines faith in the legislative process. It violates fundamental concepts of Americanism. We urge the members of Congress soberly to examine what this committee has done and resolutely to put an end to its travesty on the American idea.

Age In Congress

Without attempting to draw any hard and fast lines as to the age at which legislators should retire, we think that the public will applaud the decision of Senator Hart not to run for a six-year senatorial term at the age of 69. Senator Green was quick to point out that fading powers are not merely a matter of age. Some men are too old for vigorous work at 50; others may stand up under it at 75. The fact remains that Congress has too many men of advanced age in key positions. The tendency for men to cling to legislative posts beyond the period of full capacity seems to be much stronger than the tendency to quit too soon.

There is further difficulty in the fact that the seniority rule frequently places or retains men of advanced years in key positions. The burden of a major chairmanship is heavier than a man of 75 or 80 years can reasonably be expected to carry. Yet men who wish to remain in Congress are reluctant to give up chairmanships to which they are entitled under the rules. For this reason it may be hoped that the La Follette-Monroney Commitfee on the Organization of Congress will bring in a recommendation to relieve legislators of their chairmanships at a fixed age, say 70 years. Former chairmen would thus assume the role of elder statesmen with relief from administrative details but without substantial loss of prestige.

Before any great pressure can be applied for the retirement of men of declining powers, however, Congress will have to enact a retirement system for legislators. No doubt the committee studying Congress will also have something to say on this point. Men who have given their best years to public service should not be asked to go out and start new careers for themselves when they become too old to keep up the fast pace that legislative work entails. Clearly the first moves in inducing aged legislators to give way to younger men are up to Congress itself.

Non Sequitur

The action of Russia in countering the Iranian request to the Security Council to look into Russian activities in Azerbaijan by demanding an investigation of British activities in Greece and Indonesia recalls the old and no doubt apocryphal story told by Moscow correspondents of the visit made by an American to a Russian aircraft factory. The American was shown all over the plant. He saw the assembly line, the wing section, the cafeteria for the workers and finally the field where the presumably completed planes were lined up ready to fly off. It was all very impressive until he took a second look at the planes. They had no engines and no propellers. He called attention to this fact, whereupon the individual showing him around burst out: "Engines, engines! Why are you making such a fuss about engines? How about your sharecroppers!"

NEIGHBOR

(Moment at Evening)

I saw a man, three fields away,
Walk up a curving hill;
I saw him plain, because the hay
Was down . . . I saw him fill
His pipe, and pause to shield the flame,
(I saw it as it glowed)
A man against the sky, the same
I'd talked to on the road;

His head was higher than a cloud.
His shoulder blocked the sea,
And, standing there, he seemed endowed
With bright tranquillity;
That man seemed far, three fields away,
From common speech and talk,
And yet tomorrow, I may say

Poll On Pay

I was very much interested in The Post's poll results published on January 13 of the reaction of District of Columbia residents to the proposed pay increases for Congressmen and Cabinet members. May I point out that your questions are rather too simple in view of the facts? Ought not the questions be asked more in this form:

Industry, such as General Motors, pays its president more than a quarter of a million dollars. Is the business of the United States equally important, so that we ought to consider a similar salary for the President of the United States?

General Motors, General Electric, Metro-Goldwin-Mayer, and other corporations, pay their executive vice presidents $100,000 or more a year. How can we expect to get men of equal caliber as Cabinet members or justices of the Supreme Court for $12,000 or $15,000 a year?

A similar comparison should be made between other executive and administrative officers in big business and the Congressmen who run the business of the biggest single agency in the United States, which is the Federal Government.

The very replies which you received indicate that most of the persons whom you questioned thought of Congressmen in comparison to themselves, not in comparison with the business executives who are the criteria against whom the business executives in Government must be compared.

WILLARD W. BEATTY
Director of Education, U. S. Department of the Interior, Office of Indian Affairs.
Washington, Jan. 17.

I was jarred by the Post Poll on January 13 on more pay for Congressmen, especially by the implication on the part of half the "nos" that only an average man, instead of one of the best, should be the Representative of 300,000 or more people.

All the reasons listed for voting no increase seemed based on snap judgments.

This poll, in particular, shows a need for further editorial comment, and perhaps all future poll reports might have an accompanying section of reactions by a few chosen experts to the results as well as to the original questions.

The general interest in polls should make such discussion attractive even while being educational.

Broken Bottles

I am a victim of the vicious practice of pint and half-pint alcoholic addicts who drain their brown bottles while cruising about in automobiles, and then toss them out on the sidewalk or gutter, where they lie until some innocent driver, stopping to allow a passenger out, hears the crushing of glass and the hissing escape of air, and disembarks to discover that he or she has run over and broken to bits an empty flask, and that the precious tire they have been guarding and trying to preserve for a few additional miles of wear has been made hors-de-combat.

During the recent severe weather I had to walk to a store several blocks distance for some provisions. On my way back from 14th to 18th sts. nw., I counted 15 flasks lying close to the curb, or in the gutter, some broken to pieces, others unbroken, but of course empty.

I have also observed in my rounds that some of the store janitors have a habit of cleaning the pavements in front of the stores and sweeping the broken glass into the gutters where it stays for weeks, or until the street cleaner brushes it into a pile to be taken away in a cart. The condition is very prevalent along upper 14th st. and Georgia ave. nw. Why shouldn't something be done about it. A stiff fine would help matters a lot.

Washington's Two Faces

In your ssue of January 17 your readers are told that a "chorus" of Congressmen have raised their voices in protest against the proposed additions to the White House—additions which would cost over $1,500,000. These protests are made on the ground that the changes would "destroy an historic landmark;" and apparently the telegrams of protest with which the Congreessmen are "flooded" are based upon the same objection.

Among all these voices are none raised to protest against spending millions to enlarge great public buildings, while many residents of this city are living in conditions which owners of dogs and cats would consider unfit for their pets. In your issue of January 13 you call attention to this fact under the heading, "White House Hammers to Send Hollow Echo Rattling Through Squalor of Snows Court."

Can Washingtonians continue to take pride in this city of outward splendor while behind the magnificence lurk human dwellings which are breeding places of crime and disease?

Where are the women's altruistic organizations, the men's "service clubs"? Where are the thousands who on Sundays go from their comfortable homes to worship in beautiful churches? Have they forgotten that question asked by Him whom they worship, "Which now . . . was neighbor unto him——?"

VIRGINIA T. YEAMAN.
Washington, Jan. 17.

Share And Save

There are no enemy children. The estimated millions of children in foreign countries without the necessities of life and suffering from cold, hunger and disease are innocent of any "crimes against humanity." It is reported that between the Oder and the Neisse Rivers in eastern Germany all children under 2 years old have died. At Eberswald and Neuruppin in Germany the infant mortality was recently said to be 100 per cent. Conditions in fact are so appalling that Archbishop Griffin of London, upon returning from Europe said:

"Dr. Goebbels attempted to conquer German defeatism during the war by the atrocity story that the British and Americans planned to remove the children of Germany and bring them up in Britain and America. The atrocity story would be a merciful deliverance if it came true today."

UNRRA's wretchedly small budget is but a tiny patch of oil on a vast, heaving sea of human misery. In Germany alone upward of 20 million people are exposed to the hardships of winter without adequate housing (or without any housing at all). UNRRA cannot possibly care for the millions of persons being herded from their homes in the so-called population transfers. In fact neither UNRRA nor private relief are allowed to operate in Germany. Recently 50 religious and educational leaders in this country indorsed a "share and save" campaign. It asks all "in the name of Jesus Christ—on His birthday"—to write to Congressmen and Senators urging opening of all countries, including the Axis lands, to American relief; to sacrifice the equivalent of a meal per week for overseas relief and to send name and address to "Share and Save," Josiah P. Marvel, 241 Lexington ave., New York 17, N. Y.

Our Economic System

There is much evidence pointing to the fact that our many strikes at the present time are the result of a well-laid, behind-the-scenes plan, on the part of the CIO and at least some persons directing the policy of this Administration, to place our industry on the communistic production-for-use basis with elimination of all profits. The President some months ago announced that most corporations were able to pay substantial increases in wages to their employes—a statement that was a clear invitation for all unions to call strikes. He also stated that this would not necessitate an increase in the prices of the manufactured products. All of the so-called fact-finding boards which have been packed with New Dealers and their "findings" in each instance, if followed, would result in the payment of substantially all profits to the employes in the form of wages. In the case of the Capital Transit Co. the company will actually run into debt, after submitting to one of these fact-finding awards, unless it obtains an increase in fares.

In the case of the steel strike the President, instead of splitting the difference between the offer of Mr. Fairless and the demand of Mr. Murray, suggested a figure which was within 1 cent of Mr. Murray's demand and then tried to bulidoze Mr. Fairless into acceptance. Of course, the OPA has been behind the scenes in this dispute refusing to grant any increase in steel prices above $2.50 a ton—an increase to which United States Steel has admittedly been entitled under the law for many months. With the threat of Government seizure (or confiscation) and the enormous loss resulting from a strike hanging over his head, it is evident that Mr. Fairless would have been willing to grant any increase that he thought United States Steel could pay—short of elimination of all profits. Anyone believing in our profit system would be willing to grant this. But even this was not sufficient to satisfy the President or Mr. Murray. Mr. Kaiser—the fair-haired boy of the New Deal—who has received plenty of Government subsidies, now urges everyone to support the President. It looks as though full support would result in the overthrow of our present economic system.

OBSERVER.
Washington, Jan. 21.

After World War I, frantic voices urged that the United States maintain her traditional isolation. It was viewed as a sacred feature of our national heritage. After 25 years of painful and costly experience we recognized that American isolation was outmoded and had to be scrapped.

After World War II, a cry goes up in defense of the American system of free enterprise. It, too, is invested with a peculiar sanctity by certain elements within our population. But it, also, is outmoded and needs to be modified.

The ideal of a more abundant life for all has gripped the masses. But that abundant life can no longer be found by going westward and staking out a claim. It must be achieved by a more just and equitable distribution of the fruits of industry.

Management will do well to recognize that it cannot enjoy security as long as labor is insecure. If it is wise it will accept the principle of industrial democracy and share with labor the responsibilities and the rewards of industry.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Senate Politics

IN THE 75 PRINTED pages of President Truman's message to Congress, he made one reference to the fair employment practices commission bill. It was listed with 20 other measures which had been previously requested by the White House and not yet acted upon by Congress.

Thus the President calmly overlooked the revolt within his own party which has erupted in the Senate. That revolt broke out, of course, after he had completed the writing of his message.

But it is as ominous for his program—for the whole reconversion program of the Nation—as the industrial warfare which has now begun on the steel front. It gives to most of what the President had to say an air of unhappy irrelevance.

Summing up his admirable passage on general policies, the President said: "In short, the way we handle the proper functions of Government, the way we time the exercise of our traditional and legitimate governmental functions, has a vital bearing on the economic health of the Nation."

No one could disagree with that. Timing is the essence in this FEPC business.

PART OF THE controversy is over who started the brawl in the Senate. Senator Walter George of Georgia, in an angry explosion, blamed the President himself for the fact that the FEPC bill got priority at the very start of a session in which so much vital legislation must be adopted if we are to have orderly reconversion.

Certainly, the President had nothing to do with that decision. If there had been anything like discipline or even a semblance of unity in his party, the FEPC bill would not have been called up until emergency legislation had been cleared away.

Then, when some of the measures vital to reconversion had been passed, the FEPC issue could have been fought out. As the President said so well, the way we time the exercise of our traditional and legitimate governmental functions has a vital bearing on the economic health of the Nation.

The politics of all this in an election year hardly needs any explanation.

Minority Leader Joe Martin's rubicund face is wreathed in smiles these days. The Democrats, fighting their own intra-party fight, solved all his problems for him. At one point it had seemed that he would have to herd up the House Republicans to sign a petition to force a bill providing a permanent fair employment practices commission out of the Rules Committee, which has bottled it up.

But now that is unnecessary. Genial Joe Martin has found a post-Christmas Christmas present on his doorstep, all handsomely wrapped up in tissue paper and tinsel, presented with the compliments of the Democratic Party.

There is one way out. That is to override the ancient and outmoded rules of the Senate and end the farce of unlimited debate which permits a stubborn minority to thwart the will of the majority.

THE REPUBLICANS in the Senate, with one or two exceptions, stand in a disciplined phalanx behind FEPC. (In a number of instances, this has little to do with conviction; it is a matter of party strategy angling for the Negro votes. Enough Northern Democrats favor a permanent FEPC to provide the needed majority if they are willing to stand up and be counted.

But what would happen to the President's program after such a move is something else again. It might well stir in the Southerners such resentment and bitterness as to imperil every other measure he has asked for.

It would arouse the kind of defensive reaction that could mean stalemate. Already several Southern Senators have said they would oppose the Administration's loan to Great Britain. If this feeling should spread—an angry provincialism set against the world—then the loan proposal may be defeated, and this is the cornerstone of the Administration's foreign economic program.

We talk about reconverting from a war that ended in 1945. We are still, it seems, reconverting—the word they used then was reconstructing—from a war that ended in 1865.

Rees Bill

A short time ago your editor of "The Federal Diary," in his daily column reported that "The Administration has switched its position on the Rees bill H. R. 2948 which would exempt from income tax the first $1440 of Civil Service pensions," and that "the bill now faces a veto if it is passed. All of which means the bill is dead."

This bill, considered from all angles, by the House of Representatives, was passed by that body and referred to the Senate Committee on Finance, where it now rests. It is inconceivable that the Senate and the President would deny the little relief which the passage of this bill would give, to those retired Federal employes now existing on an annuity of $100 and less per month, and these annuities now paid with 65-cent dollars, when compared with the prewar dollar of 100 cents.

Congress has passed, and the President has approved, legislation which reduces the income taxes of corporations and other business activities—why deny such consideration to the aged retired employes?

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

U. S. Jobs Recommended For 100,000 More GIs

VETERANS: Federal jobs for an additional 100,000 war veterans have been recommended by the House Appropriations Committee.

KLUTTZ

The committee added $644,000 to the 1947 budget of the Civil Service Commission and it made it clear that the money was to be used only for the recruiting and placement of 100,000 additional veterans to replace war service people.

In the 1947 fiscal year that begins on July 1, Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming estimated that 414,000 veterans would be given Federal jobs, or 60 per cent of all placement. This compares with 9 per cent in 1945 and 36 per cent (estimated) for the 1946 fiscal year.

Fleming also predicted the number of Federal workers would slump to 2,000,000 by June 30 and to 1,600,000 on June 30, 1947. The latter is the lowest official estimate to be made publicly and it was arrived at by Budget Bureau officials after a close study of the proposed 1947 budget.

The number of full-time Federal employes in this country today is about 2,400,000 which mean 800,000 will be dropped in the next 17 months. In proportion, Washington will be hit lighter than field offices as the experts foresee a minimum 180,000 Federal population here.

WAR SERVICE: The commission estimates that 700,000 jobs now held by war service appointees will be declared permanent and they will be filled by permanent people chosen through open competitive exams. The first of these exams will get under way reasonably soon and 50,000 appointments will be made before June 30. Budget Bureau gave the commission funds to replace 200,000 additional war service people with permanent appointees during the 1947 fiscal year. However, the committee, with the enthusiastic approval of Civil Service, recommended funds to replace 300,000 and it specified the additional 100,000 shall be veterans.

PREFERENCE: Flemming also gave the committee a tip-off on how war service people who take the competitive exams will be handled. He said in part: "The commission will require that all war service appointees who take and pass an examination but who receive grades between 70 and 79, for example, be replaced by persons from the top o. the eligible list. In this way, and only in this way, can we give full force and effect to the preference provisions of the Preference Act."

Now this does not mean that every war service person who makes from 70 to 79 on a competitive test will be fired. Flemming cited it merely as an example of what could happen. It could easily work out, for instance, that every typist who passed the test will be offered a job while every economist whose grade is under 90 will be automatically disqualified. In other words, it will depend on the number of eligible at the top of the register and the number of vacancies.

STATISTICS: These are among the interesting figures placed before the committee: Turnover among Federal employes will drop from an average of 4.6 per cent to 2.5 per cent in 1947 . . . The salary of the average Federal employes covered by the Civil Service Retirement Act is $2220 a year . . . Of the 900,000 reduction in Federal employment during the 1946 fiscal year, 800,000 will be war service and 100,000 will be permanents and that there will be 900,000 permanents in Government on July 1.

The commission estimates that 125,000 employes who will be laid off during 1946 will be picked up and hired by other agencies and that 150,000 veterans will return to claim their old jobs. It also predicts there will be keen rivalry again for Federal jobs, jumping from 1.6 applicants per job in 1945 to 4.7 applicants this year. And 78 per cent of all applications, the commission believes, will be from veterans.

FCC: Federal Communications was cut $500,000 by the committee but it will still have that much more in excess of this year's appropriations . . . Federal Power was cut $591,000 by the committee and it won't—if the cut stands—have funds to increase its staff here . . . Civil Service, despite the small increase in funds, won't be able to increase its staff either here or in the field . . . Federal Trade was cut $478,880 but it would still have slightly more money than this year. It sought funds to collect industrial corporation statistics and the committee denied it on the ground it would duplicate work in other agencies.

Public Roads Administration took the largest single cut, 38 million dollars, for road construction. Even so, it would have 112 million dollars more than it has this year . . . General Accounting was cut by the committee, a rare experience for it. The committee said it expected a substantial cut in its Corporation Audit requirements in 1948 . . . The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics was given nearly three million over the budget estimate to hire several hundred additional scientists to work on aviation research.

Localities Seek Larger Share Of Rum Profit

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Bills to give the localities $500,000 additional from the State's alcoholic beverage profits, provide additional funds for secondary roads, and permit the highway commission to built roads from farmhouses to public highways at farmers' expense were among new legislation offered in the Virginia General Assembly today.

The influx of new proposals also included a new bill with Dr. E. W. Botetourt as chief patron to provide $210,000 a year in State funds for free textbooks for elementary public school pupils. Under this measure, the localities would purchase the books and the State would reimburse them to the extent of 48 cents per enrolled pupil. The State appropriation, however, is conditional—available only if it would not add to or create a deficit.

Earlier Bill Shelved

An earlier bill, with Dr. Dodd also as chief patron, would provide $185,000 a year for the same purpose with the localities paying one-third of the costs of the books, but patrons asked the committee on schools and colleges today to consider only the new bill.

The bill to give the localities $500,000 additional from the ABC profits was offered by delegate John B. Spiers, of Radford along with a number of other measures carrying out recommendations of a committee of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council which made a study of local and State taxation.

The additional money for the localities would be provided by beginning the split of profits on the first dollar, instead of the present arrangement whereby the State reserves $750,000 before splitting the profits on the basis of one third to the State and two thirds to the localities.

More for Secondary Roads

A bill by delegate C. M. Waldroy of Amelia would boost from 30 to 40 per cent the minimum of highway funds to be expended on the secondard road system, which includes approximately 37,500 miles of rural highways.

At the same time, Senators Charles T. Moses of Appomattox and James D. Hagood of Clover offered a Senate bill to empower the highway department to improve and build roads from farmhouses to adjoining highways, the cost to be borne by the farmers.

Governor Tuck recommended in his legislative message Monday that greater attention be given the secondary, or farm-to-market, road system and specifically proposed legislation to accomplish the purpose of the Moses-Hagood bill.

The Spiers bill proposed a number of other important changes affecting local revenues. One would classify motor vehicles and certain other equipment, such as office furnishings, of corporations as tangible personal property, subject to local taxation. These items, under a supreme court of appeals decision in the Michael Bakery Co., case from Roanoke, have heretofore been classed as capital and have been subject to State taxation as such. State revenue from this source, Spiers said, amounts to about $50,000 a year, but he said the localities would realize a larger amount because of the higher local levies on personal property.

New Reassessments Asked

The other Spiers bills would provide compulsory reassessment of real estate every four years; establish a uniform fiscal year throughout the Commonwealth beginning on July 1 and ending on June 30; include 3.2 beer sales in merchants' gross sales of purposes of local taxation; give the localities 40 per cent of the tax evied on State banks' stock; incude towns of 2500 population in the law requiring cities to furnish the auditor of public accounts with detailed statements of receipts and disbursements for his study of the comparative cost of local government, and also authorize the auditor of preecribe uniform clasification of revenues and expenditures as an aid to the cities in handling their accounts; and provide for county commissioners of the revenue to issue building permits for any construction, repair, or improvement involving more than $250.

Resolution Approved

The House completed its consideration of one piece of legislation by approving 79 to 1 the Campbell joint resolution for a constitutional amendment enabling the State to tax, with Federal consent, certain Federal property. Approved by the 1944 session, it now goes to the Senate for concurrence and if approved there, then will go before the people in a referendum.

By standing vote, the House adopted a resolution by Delegate J. Howard Holleman of Surry paying tribute to Delegate M. P. Sebrell of Southampton who died this morning after suffering a stroke while en route to Richmond from his home. The House also adjourned in respect to Sebrell until 11 a. m. Wednesday.

The Senate was in session only 12 minutes and immediately after adjourning until noon tomorrow, its privileges and elections committee unanimously reported the Hopkins House Bill to restore the local spring primaries to the first Tuesday in April, correcting an oversight in the 1945 War Voters' Act which advanced the primaries to March and added 30 days to the period in advance for filing notices of candidacy. The Hopkins bill restores the 60-day filing notice.

Nursing Homes Measure

New legislation in the Senate included a bill by Senators Lloyd C. Bird of Chesterfield, Marvin M. Minter of Mathews, and W. N. Neff of Abingdon, authorizing the Department of Public Welfare to review the needs of the State for District Nursing Homes for the care of the aged,-infirm and chronically ill, and to encourage the establishment by the localities of such additional homes as may be necessary on a Statewide pattern.

Senators W. C. Caudill, of Giles, Hagood and John S. Battle of Albemarle offered a bill to establish a commission on post-mortem examinations and providing for the appointment of a chief medical examiner. Senator M. M. Long of St. Paul introduced two bills regulating allowances and mileage for witnesses in criminal and civil cases and allowing witnesses in alcoholic beverage control hearings similar allowances.

Other bills introduced in the House included a measure by Delegate Frank P. Moncure to include Prince William County in the act giving certain county boards of supervisors the powers vested by the constitution and statutes in city and town councils.

State Traffic Crashes Gain 26% in Year

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Traffic collisions increased 26 per cent in 1945 over the preceding year, figures released today by the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission disclosed.

A total of 13,039 collisions were reported last year, the announcement said, resulting in 431 deaths and 6787 persons injured. Last year there were 480 more collisions, 46 more deaths, and 172 more persons injured than in 1944.

The State's traffic casualties averaged 1.2 persons killed and 18.6 persons injured from motor vehicle accidents every day.

November and December were the months in which toll of life was heaviest, 46 deaths occurring in each of those months. This compared with 30 deaths in November and 44 in December, 1944.

Calvert, Caroline and Kent Counties all reported no deaths or injuries during December last year, and seven other counties reported no deaths.

During that month 21 of the 46 killed in accidents were pedestrians. Two-car collisions accounted for 11 more, cars colliding with fixed objects for eight, and with street cars three.

Doctor's Laundry Bundle Collected By Error in Drive

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—An estimated three tons of second-hand clothing, shoes and bedding were collected by volunteer workers in Sunday afternoon's Victory Clothing Collection, according to a report from Louis Matacia, chairman for the Lions Club-sponsored drive. About 25 trucks and automobiles toured the city, manned by more than 100 members of the Lions and other civic clubs and Boy Scouts.

The only slip-up in the whole proceeding, Mr. Matacia said, came when an over zealous volunteer mistakenly picked up a bundle of laundry placed on a porch by Dr. Claude Lee, jr., for his laundryman to pick up.

The doctor, who left the bundle before the home of his sister on Jefferson Park ave., put in a hasty appearance at the Midway School building, where the clothes are being packed for shipment overseas, but the bundle couldn't be located in the tons of assorted items.

Dr. Lee said he would be glad to just go ahead and contribute the clothes, but it so happens that some of the items are irreplaceable.

Winchester 'Blue' Baby Will Be Returned

Winchester, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Thomas Wayne Fadeley, Winchester's "blue" baby, will be brought home in an effort to build the youngster up before making another attempt at surgery to correct his condition.

Albert Fadeley, father of the infant, and a World War II veteran, stated that he was acting under the recommendations of officials at Johns Hopkins Hospital, where the three attempts to perform the Blalock-Taussig operation have had to be postponed at the last minute because of Tommy's respiration.

The local Legion post headed an appeal made last December for funds to aid the stricken child. Local citizens responded with more than $1200.

Markey Opens Governor Drive, Stresses Needs of Veterans

Frederick, Md., Jan. 22 (AP).—Brig. Gen. D. John Markey, himself a veteran of three wars, asserted tonight that "one of Maryland's greatest challenges is the integration of the 160,000 veterans into the life of the Commonwealth."

"It is a tremendous task in which we must put the same superior effort that characterized both the fighting front and the home front during the war," said the veteran National Guard officer who served in the Spanish-American war and both world conflicts.

Markey announced last week that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, subject to the June primary. He expects to file his certificate of candidacy with the secretary of State at Annapolis tomorrow.

His First Campaign

In a statement opening his first campaign for public office, he asserted that "my best efforts are pledged to the upbuilding of a strong and courageous Republican Party in Maryland—a party of action and constructive policies."

After reviewing the problems and needs of war veterans, Markey said:

"Our party has an unparalleled opportunity at this time to enlist the services of thousands of our returning service men and women and prove to them that the Republican Party is the traditional friend of the veteran."

Markey said he would take up other matters of State interest later and present "concrete recommendations to the people of Maryland."

"My approach to the State's problems," he said, "is that of an administrator and business man who has a sincere interest in fair play to labor and who is devoted to the spirit of free enterprise and the American way of life."

Hits Inadequate Plans

As to veterans' problems, Markey said:

"One need only mention housing and jobs to realize how inadequate our planning has been on these two vital veterans' problems.

"Ae the veterans take off their uniforms and take up civilian life, we find them as they entered service, intelligent, wholesome and resolute.

"They are naturally somewhat disheartened when they see the advancement of those who stayed home and realize that they must start again where they left off on entering service.

"Our State and Nation owe them an eternal debt of gratitude for winning the greatest war in history and saving civilization from serfdom.

"This debt cannot be settled by lip service, of which there has already been a superabundance."

Rev. G. B. Palmer Dies in Rectory Of Heart Attack

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—The Rev. Giles Buckner Palmer, D. D., 66, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church here for nearly 25 years, died of a heart attack yesterday at the church rectory.

Dr. Palmer, a native of Northampton County and a nephew of the late Rev. Giles B. Cooke, who served on the staff of Gen. Robert E. Lee, attended Virginia Military Institute, where he was graduated in 1900. He served for six years on the faculty of St. John's College in Shanghai, China, and returned to the United States to enter Virginia Theological Seminary where he was graduated and ordained in the Episcopal ministry in 1914.

He had served Episcopal churches at Woodstock and at White Post, Clarke Conty, prior to coming to Richmond.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Read Barksdale Palmer, whom he married in October, 1914; a son, Charles Buckner Palmer, Richmond.

Charlottesville Youth Is Held as Forger

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—A 17-year-old boy is being held by police for Juvenile Court hearing on a charge of forging and cashing eight checks among Main Street merchants.

According to the police, the youth allegedly forged the name of Dr. J. S. Yates, dentist, to the checks, ranging from $15 to $17.

Lower VEPCO Rates Start On April 1

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Rate reductions that will save Virginia customers of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. approximately $1,368,000 a year, beginning April 1, were announced today by the State Corporation Commission.

The new schedules, which represent the third step taken by the commission toward establishing uniform rates throughout the territory of VEPCO since its merger with Virginia Public Service Co. in May, 1944, are the result of investigations of utility rates which the commission has made annually for a number of years.

The reductions announced today in a statement by the three commissioners, Chairman Harvey B. Apperson, H. Lester Hooker and L. McCarthy Downs, will be applicable throughout the Virginia territory of the company with the exception of the Alexandria-Arlington area, where rates previously had been reduced while that territory was served by Virginia Public Service.

The revisions will save residential consumers approximately $510,000 a year, commercial and other large customers $790,000, municipalities on lighting rates $36,000, and the commonwealth, chiefly in rates to State institutions, $32,000.

The commissioners said that the repeal of the Federal Excess Profits Tax was taken into consideration in arriving at the new schedules.

They did not attempt to estimate the number of individual customers who would benefit, but said a large portion of the approximately 260,000 residential customers affected as well as larger consumers.

Virginian Charged With Slaying Wife And Shooting Self

Portsmouth, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Norfolk County Officer J. S. Leonard reported that Claude Donald Drew, 42, former navy yard worker, shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Nellie Drew, 35, and then wounded himself seriously today with the same weapon, a .22-caliber rifle.

Leonard, who said he had obtained a warrant charging Drew with the slaying, gave this account of the double shooting:

Mrs. Drew, barefoot and clad in a night gown, ran from her home in Broadmoor to the home of a neighbor about 8 a. m. Drew followed her into the neighbor's house, picked up a rifle standing in a corner, and demanded that his wife write a check for $2000.

Mrs. Drew agreed to write the check but her husband, saying he was going to kill her anyhow, fired several bullets into her body and one into her head. Drew went home, returned to the neighbor's house shortly afterward, picked up the rifle, held the barrel beneath his chin and fired one shot.

He was brought to King's Daughters Hospital, where his condition was described as serious.

Norfolk & Western Rwy. Declares Extra of $3

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (AP).—Directors of the Norfolk & Western Railway Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share and an extra dividend of $3 on the common stock, payable March 9 to stockholders of record February 13.

Extra dividends had been discontinued in 1942, because of a reduction in net income during the war and the advisability of conserving cash, the board declared.

Common stock earned $15.50 a share in 1945, compared with $15.15 in 1944.

Quiet Picketing Marks Strike at 10 Baltimore Plants

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Peaceful picketing and no attempts by plant managements to continue operations characterized the strike of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) today at 10 Baltimore plants whose 20,000 employes are out.

The Bethlehem Steel Co., which employs 15,000, provided corrugated sheet iron to enable pickets at its Sparrows Point plant to build sheds for protection from the cold as the strike continued into its second day.

Small groups of pickets at the plant build fires and used the corrugated iron to put lean-to's in an effort to warm up.

Albert Atallah, district USW director, said the union was carrying out all agreements with local plants permitting a specified number of maintenance workers to pass picket lines. In some cases, the numbers were increased, he added, when compaies said more men were needed.

Cancer Control Unit Sought in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Jan. 23 (AP).—Arguments for establishment of a division of cancer control in the State Department of Health, financed by an annual appropriation of $106,500 as recommended by the advosory legislative council, were presented tonight by officers of the Virginia Cancer Foundation at a joint haering of the House Appropirations Committee and the Senate Finance Committee here.

Dr. George Cooper, University of Virginia roentgenologist and director of the foundation of Charlottesville, and Dr. Isaac A. Bigger, Medical College of Virginia Foundation president, will head the delegation.

Hiram Boyer's Rites Set Today In Berryville

Berryville, Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Hiram Edward Boyer, Clarke County resident and retired farmer, who died Sunday evening at his home. He was 81.

Mr. Boyer was born at Luray and at one time operated a merchantile and livery stable business at Edinburg. He had farming interests in Fauquier and Warren Counties and was the first county agent for Clarke County. He also served on the Clarke County School Board for a time.

Two daughters, a half-brother and a half-sister survive.

Jeter B. Harlow

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22.—The funeral of Jeter B. Harlow, 49, a veteran of World War I, who died suddenly while on a visit to his brother, Addison V. Harlow, in Louisa County, was held here this afternoon. He was a native of Louisa County, son of the late Robert A. and Molly Crews Harlow. He married Miss Mary Reynolds, who survives, with one daughter, Mrs. Jane Forsythe. He also leaves five brothers.

Mrs. Carrie W. LaRue

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22.—Funeral rites for Mrs. Carrie Wilmer LaRue of Millboro Springs, who died at the University of Virginia Hospital, were held this afternoon at Woodland Church, Millboro Springs. She was a native of Rockbridge County, daughter of William and W. Hickman Wilmer, and was 49. Besides her husband, Clarence C. LaRue, she is survived by several children.

Thomas L. Rosser

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22.—Funeral rites for Thomas L. Rosser, 80, Buckingham County farmer, who died Sunday night at his home near Dillwyn, were held this afternoon in St. Andrews Church in Buckingham. Mr. Rosser was a native of Campbell County, son of the late Albert R. and Eliabeth Gough Rosser. He married Miss Sarah Ella Maxey of Buckingham, with survives, with two daughters.

Dr. Edwin L. Burton

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22.—Dr. Edwin Lee Burton, father of Dr. Edwin W. Burton, professor of ophthalmology at the University of Virginia, died Sunday at his home in McKinney, Tex., following a brief illness. Funeral and interment will take place in McKinney. He married Miss Elizabeth Mae Fuer of McKinney, who survives. Besides Dr. E. W. Burton, he leaves two other sons, Grover Burton of McKinney and Duer Burton of Fort Worth, Tex.

3 Appeal Fines On Oyster Fishing

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 22 (AP).—Three appeals of Deal Island men conviced in illegal oyster fishing were docketed today for the January session of the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court.

The men are John Benton, Raymond Benton and Dewey Anderson, who were convicted and fined $200 each after hearings before Magistrate James G. Woodward.

They were charged with catching oyster in a resserved area known as Bloody Point.

The State Tidewater Fisheries Commission explained that a reserve area is one set aside by the commission for oyster farming.

The Pilot's Psalm

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 22 (Spl.).—A paraphrase of the 23d Psalm to make its promises fit into the experiences of the Army flier was published here as an in memoriam by the family of Bruce Delmar Bovey who was killed in action in his plane at North Pickingham, Norfolk, England, on January 19, 1945.

Titled "The Pilot's Psalm," it read:

The Lord is my pilot; I shall not crash.
He maketh me to fly in clear skies.
He leadeth me down to smooth landings.
He keepeth my chart.
He leadeth me through the pathless ways of the skies for His Name's sake.
Yea though I fly through the storms and tempests of life, I shall fear no danger; for Thou are near me.
Thy love and Thy care, they protect me . . .
Thou preparest an airport before me in the homeland of eternity.
Thou emblasoneth the skies with Thy beauty; my plane flies gracefully.
Surely sunlight and starlight shall favor me on the flight I take.
And I shall abide in the presence of my God forever.

H. G. Clark, 56, Dies; Militant W. Va. Editor

Williamson, W. Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Hubert Galbraith Clark, editor and publisher of the Williamson Daily News, who although a staunch Democrat never hesitated to support the candidate of another party if he thought it was for the public interest, died last night in a Bluefield hospital.

Clark, 56, a native of Rocky Mount, Va., succembed after a year's illness to cancer and complications.

The militant editor's writings often touched off sharp criticism from opponents, and two years ago brought on physical assault when he vigorously set out in a campaign to clean up the city.

A son of the late Rev. Peter C. Clark, a Presbyterian minister, and Sarah Horne Clark, he graduated from Hampden Sydney College in Virginia in 1911 and soon afterward started his career as a cub reported on the Birmingham (Ala.), Ledger.

Successively, he served as city editor of a Rome, Ga., paper, with the Salem (Va.), Times Register, and after World War I as a reporter at Annapolis, Md., on the Roanoke (Va.), Times and Danville (Va.), Register.

Clark was city editor of the Welch Daily News for several years before his appointment as editor and manager of the Williamson paper in 1927.

Official Discounts Fugitive's Charge Of Va. Brutality

Richmond, Va., Jan 22 (AP).—Maj. Frank Smyth, superintendent of the Virginia State Penitentiary, today termed as "sensationalism" statements by Lawrence Starling, 23-year-old fugitive from the Virginia penal system, that he would "never come out alive" after making public his charges of brutality on the part of prison officials.

Starling is now being held by Missouri authorities pending an extradition hearing.

The superintendent said that Starling's corporal punishment had consisted only in "standing in cuffs" for 20 hours for one rule infraction and 30 hours for another.

Smyth said neither of the periods was continuous, but was carried out over a period of several days. He explained that "standing in cuffs" consists of being handcuffed to a bar at chest level, leaving the prisoner enough freedom of movement for moderate relaxation.

Woodson Again Heads State Police

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—C. W. Woodson, jr., former superintendent of State Police, will return to his pre-war post with the rank of colonel. Governor Tuck handed Woodson his new commission yesterday when he visited the governor's office to pay his respects.

Woodson, now on terminal leave from the Navy, expected to be discharged shortly.

In announcing the appointment, Governor Tuck said Woodson would take charge of the State police organization without delay. In Woodson's absence, Maj. James R. Dunn, formerly executive officer, has been acting superintendent.

State Delegate Sebrell Dies; Stricken in Car

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Delegate M. P. Sebrell of Southampton, found unconscious in his automobile parked on the Petersburg pike yesterday, died this morning in medical college hospital with regaining consciousness.

The member of the general assembly was discovered by State and Chesterfield County police who were called to investigate the automobile. It was as first believed there had been an accident, but later it was indicated that Delegate Sebrell, feeling ill, had parked his car, turned off the ignition and lights and had remained unconscious in the car over night.

The family in Courtland reported that he had left there about 3 p. m. Sunday to return to Richmond for Monday's general assembly. He had been at home over the weekend.

It was believed that the delegate, operator of a peanut mill in Courtland, had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, but the coroner's investigation had not been completed here.

The 69-year-old native of Sebrell, Va., had served in the legislature continuously since 1940. Educated at Randolph-Macon Academy and Randodlph-Macon College, he was a member of the Methodist Church, Ruritan club and Cypress Cove Country Club in Courtland. He was not married.

B. & O. Heads Pay Tribute To Employes

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—In a special report on operations in "V-Year 1945," officers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad paid tribute today to railroad employes who handled a mammoth war-time transportation task.

"In 1945, collectively, American railroads handled the greatest mass transportation of men and machines (begun at the time of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor) that the world has ever seen," said a preface to the report.

"The full magnitude of the job they accomplished, in spite of acute labor and equipment shortages, has not, even yet, been realized.

"But someday the miracle will come into proper perspective, and the railroad men and women whose ingenuity and determined effort accomplished the seemingly impossible will be accorded the honor they deserve among the ranks of those who, literally, saved civilization."

As for the B. & O. itself, said the nine officers contributing to the report, it continued in the victory year of 1945 to carry on at about the same pace it did in the last full war year of 1944.

J. J. Ekin, vice president in charge of accounting and claims, said the road's 1945 passenger revenue totalled approximately 48 million dollars. This compared with the all-time 1944 record of approximately 50 million dollars.

During 1945, he said, the road carried 13,350,000 passengers and handled 138,700,000 tons of freight, receiving total operating revenues of 361 million dollars.

"The volume of traffic was lower than that of 1944, due to the cessation of hostilities in Europe and the Pacific, but it was still considerably higher than normal," Ekin said.

Fewer Lobbyists Are Registered At Richmond

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Lobbying is less than usual this year at the General Assembly, according to registration of "legislative agents" with the secretary of the Commonwealth.

Only 36 legislative agents have registered at this session to date, compared with 44 at the last session in 1944.

There are 11 lobbyists registered for labor unions, five for the insurance business, two for industry, two for horse racing. Also represented are retailers, wholesalers, the oil business, movies, and the Isaak Walton League.

Latest legislative agents to register are Benjamin Lovenstein, of the Richmond Loan Brokers Association, and Oscar L. Shewmake and John C. Goddin, for the Virginia Passenger Bus Association, Inc.

More U. S. Troops Reach Home Ports

These names were telegraphed directly to The Washington Post by the Associated Press. There is no assurance that the list is correct, because it was compiled in Europe and at Pacific bases previous to embarkation, but officials said that the margin of error is slight. Relatives should not contact the port or The Washington Post for further information.

Stands By Freighter

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The German cruiser Prinz Eugen, first Nazi warship prize to head for United States port, today changed course to stand by a Liberty ship which developed a crack amidships as she neared home shores with 19 overseas veterans.

The Frederick C. Hicks, a 7207-ton Liberty freighter, first reported the crack was spreading, but later messaged she was proceeding to Boston "at good speed" and was not in need of assistance. The war prize Eugen is manned by a German crew.

The Hicks was reported 280 miles southeast of Halifax in high seas. The naval frigate USS Croton also was dispatched to the side of the freighter.

Ship 5 Days Overdue

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Third Army Transportation Zone announced today that the Seatrain Lakehurst, a transport carrying approximately 400 troops and 60 locomotives, was due in Baltimore Thursday from Naples.

Scheduled to dock at Hawkins point, the troops will be transported to Camp Kilmer, N. J., transportation zone officials said. They added that those from Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and District of Columbia area will return to Fort George G. Meade later this week.

A Letter to the President of the United States

Hon. Harry S. Truman
President of the United States
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

You state in your message to Congress that—

"Business can in the future pay higher wages and sell for lower prices than ever before."

In our industry, our present price structure was established December 26, 1940, and then frozen by the O.P.A.

Since then, average hourly wages, exclusive of overtime, have been advanced 38%—5% more than the cost of living.

We are still generally operating three shifts a day, 48 hours to the shift. We are still paying peak war wages, both hourly and weekly.

As a result, our operating losses have been substantial for every month since and including August.

Our prices are still frozen at prewar levels.

Your statement obviously confuses our employees and is, in effect, an incitement for the men in our factories to strike and to stop the process of reconversion in our plant.

The end result is inflation in prices and deflation of employment.

Respectfully yours,

C. DONALD DALLAS
President, Revere Copper and Brass, Inc.

Intelligence Agency Created by Truman

Information for U. S. 'Security' Is Goal; State, War, Navy to Be Represented

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer.

President Truman yesterday ordered the creation of a National Intelligence Authority and charged it with the task of gathering information about foreign countries that will contribute to American "security."

It will be the first time in this Nation's peace-time history that there has been a central agency handling foreign intelligence. Agitation for some such agency began in pre-Pearl Harbor days during the so-called "spy scare."

Mr. Truman, after months of conferences with State, War and Navy officials, decided against putting the agency in any one department. Instead he directed that the National Intelligence Authority be composed of three Cabinet officers—the Secretaries of State, aWr and Navy—and a fourth nonvoting member who will be the President's "personal representative."

Coordinator Planned

This fourth official will be called the director of central intelligence, and will be designated by the President. It will be his job, working under the direction and control of the national intelligence authority, to coordinate the activities of the various intelligence agencies of the Government.

He will be assigned, too, to correlating and evaluating intelligence, and to seeing that it is made available to Government departments that ought to have it. This would meet the criticism, often heard in Washington, about the lack of teamwork among departments in matters affecting the national security.

"To Know Other Peoples"

A general idea of the work to be done by the new agency was given in an NBC broadcast recently by Alfred McCormack, Special Assistant to the Secretary of State. McCormack is in charge of the Research and Analysis organization, which was given to the State Department after the breakup of Gen. William (Wild Bill) Donovan's Office of Strategic Services. The operations end of OSS—which during the war carried on secret intelligence and sabotage abroad—was turned over to the War Department.

McCormack, in talking about the Research and Analysis organization, said what was needed was accurate and complete information about foreign countries.

"The first objective," he said, "is to know and understand the other countries and peoples of the world well enough to live with them in peace—to shape our policy, as it affects other peoples, towards the aim of peace. The second objective is to be prepared for war if it occurs."

Wartime Uses Described

McCormack said foreign intelligence is "the sum total of all information about foreign countries which is relevant to the policies and problems of the Government." It ranged, he said, from estimates of "the political intentions of a revolutionary party in some country to the most detailed kind of information, such as the depth of water at a particular point on a beach where military operations might some day occur." The great bulk of information about foreign countries, he added, could be assembled in this country.

Eighty per cent of the information used in the air war against the Japanese homeland, McCormack said, was physically within the United States when the war started. But to find it all and put it together, he said, took about two and a half years.

"If we are threatened with war again," said McCormack, "we are not likely to have two and one-half years for preparation of essential intelligence. We may not have even two and one-half months. Therefore, we propose to have our intelligence ready for any emergency."

Uncharted Field

A top-ranking Security Council member, who asked anonymity, admitted the Council was moving into an uncharted field, but said it was better to tackle big problems at the outset rather than "let them ferment."

The Russians themselves had nothing to add beyond the letters which Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate, and Dmitri Manuilsky, delegate of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist republic, filed last night.

The Soviet delegation was reinforced by the belated arrival of Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs Andrei Vishinsky.

Some officials said the Security Council might meet Thursday to decide how to tackle the case and also to consider Iran's charges that Russia was interfering in her internal affairs.

Some members of the council predicted that commissions probably would be appointed to carry out "on-the-spot" investigations in Iran, Greece and Indonesia if no means of immediate friendly settlement appeared.

Pearson is Favored

The 11-nation body scheduled an informal, secret session for tomorrow to nominate a secretary-general.

Lester Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States, appeared favored, although Trygve Lie, Norwegian Foreign Minister, was understood to be gaining support.

The General Assembly also arranged a full meeting tomorrow on the problem of creating a commission to control atomic energy.

American delegation sources said Secretary Byrnes would not speak and was expected to return to Washington after the commission is created. He will leave the delegation in the hands of Edward R. Stettinius, jr.

U. S. Visa Forms Bring High Prices in Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 22 (AP).—Some Hungarians, eager to get to the United States under the small immigration quota allowed them, have paid 50 to several hundred dollars for visa application forms—blank pieces of paper which the State Department issues free. They apparently believed possession of the forms would bring quicker action.

The current U.S. immigration quota fro Hungary is 895 yearly, but Legation sources said between 75,000 and 100,000 are expected to apply.

Arlington Red Cross Elects Harold J. Heishman Chairman

Harold J. Heishman was elected chairman of the Arlington Red Cross chapter at the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the group Monday night.

Other officers elected for 1946 were George Damm, first vice chairman, Mrs. James D. Pope, second vice chairman, W. W. McCollum, treasurer, and Mrs. Deane Rose, secretary.

Reelected to the Red Cross board for a three-year term were: Mrs. George Collier, Mrs. Deane Rose, Fr. Dixon Beattie, Harry Grant, Mrs. Frank Ball, Lelland Walker and John F. Phelan. Three members, newly elected to a three-year term, were W. W. McCollum, Mrs. James D. Pope and Dr. Thomas Pumphrey.

Mrs. Nathan Levy, chairman of the chapter's public information service was cited for 9460 hours of service during World War II.

Others whose hours of service number more than 4000 are: Mrs Gorham F. Freer, 7675; Mrs. Joseph C. Boss, 6240; Mrs. Ralph O. Smith 5873; Mrs. Robert D. Scott; 5633 Mrs. May L. Flickinger, 5100; Mrs T. C. Hudson, 4682; Mrs. Beatric Upfold, 4530, and Mrs. Robert G Smallwood, 4050.

Thirteen additional members were cited for hours of service ranging between 3000 and 4000, while approximately 6500 persons gave service of from 200 to 3000 hours during the period(chapter records show.

During war, the Arlington Chapter served 334,754 meals at canteens, camps, blood donor centers and the chapter house. The chapter had an average case load of 550 per month in the eight months preceding VJ-Day and gave assistance to 10,725 individuals and families of servicemen through the Home Service Department during the war.

Baltimore Livestock Receipts Cut 30%

Baltimore, Jan. 22 (AP).—Stock yard officials report that deliveries of livestock to Baltimore have been reduced by more than 30 per cent as a result of the Nation-wide strike of packing house employes, with stocks of meat in the city virtually exhausted.

John Stroh, sr., president of the Retail Grocers & Meat Dealers Association, said that he expected the majority of Baltimore retailers would be out of meat by tomorrow.

The situation will be acute by the end of the week, he said, even though the strike were to end today.

Atomic Auto Possible—But What a Chassis!

New York, Jan. 21 (U.P.).—Scientists now could build an automobile powered with atomic energy if anyone insisted on having one, Dean George R. Harrison of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said tonight. However, the driver "would feel pretty funny . . . perched up on top of eight feet of concrete arranged to keep damaging rays from coming through the seat cushions and with eight-foot-thick fenders of concrete on all sides to protect the passerby from radio activity."

Doctors Sew Up Heart of Woman Stabbing Victim

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 22 (AP).—A rare operation in which a woman stab victim's heart was partially removed from the body and stitched up to close the wound was credited today with saving her life.

The surgery was performed on Betty Jean Brown, 25, last Saturday night. Her condition today was described as "good." The woman suffered a deep stab through the heart and was taken to St. Margaret's Hospital.

During the operation, one doctor held the victim's heart in his hand, outside the chest cavity, while the other sewed up the half-inch incision.

Arnold Cancels Trip

Lima, Peru, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—General of the Army Henry H. Arnold, commander United States Air Forces, has abandoned his scheduled trip to Chile and will return to the United States Thursday, it was announced today. General Arnold suffered a slight heart attack last week and was forced to cancel all engagements.

let out after only a few months of service? The fathers are needed at home. We don't want more money; we want our husbands. Our children need them; we need them; they belong at home."

Mrs. Nancy Muller of Pittsburgh, who said her husband is a 36-year-old corporal in Italy, is the mother of two children. Tearfully she demanded:

"How do you think we feel about fraternization when we se pictures of our men walking with the Germans and the Japanese ? I am a good citizen. I have faith in the Government, but I'm losing it fast."

Five-Point Program

The women, who said they represented several organiaztions, including the Bring Back Daddy Club and the Fathers Release Association, presented a five-point program:

1. Continue the draft law beyond May 15.
2. Release the draft age to 38.
3. Reinduct young men formerly deferred or declared surplus.
4. Provide allotments enabling young drafetees to continue their studies abroad.
5. Lower physical standards to permit more inductions of non-fathers.

Eisenhower explained that about 700,000 fathers are now in the Army and at least 500,000 of those should be home by July 1. Should they all be turned loose now, he said, "there would be no Army."

He told the mothers he sympathized with them and wished he could get all their husbands home at once. At the same time, he added, he sympathized with unmarried men overseas who wanted to come home, get married and start families.

Have Case, He Says

Mopping his brow and confessing his experience to have been "emotionally upsetting," Eisenhower finally escaped and made his way to the committee room. The hearing opened 10 minutes late.

He told the committee the mothers "have a very fine case," but reiterated his point that "if we discharge all those men today the Army simply cannot do its job."

"It is difficult," he said, "for us to stand up and do what we must do when wives want their husbands and the fathers of their children home. There is also demand for the discharge of technical men and for dentists and physicians. "This pressure comes from every source."

He warned that if demobilization is not permitted to proceed along the lines now laid out, the Army must abandon some of the jobs it is doing.

"If any bill is enacted to take out any class not comprehended in the plans I have outlined," he said, "Congress will have to tell us which of our jobs it does not want s to do any longer."

Asked if he thought subversive elements were seeking to "wreck the morale of the Army," Eisenhower said the Army was alert for organized subversion but would not like to discuss publicly the steps taken to cope with them. He denied that soldiers are being kept overseas while alien brides are being brought to the United States.

A soldier, he said, "takes precedence over everything."

The Chief of Staff would not say directly whether he would ask for an extension of the draft act. He would wait as long as possible, he said, and then give Congress a "picture" of the situation at that time.

President Truman, in his message to Congress Monday, said the question of draft extension should be decided by the end of March. He explained the draft would have to be extended beyond May 15 if voluntary enlistments do not provide sufficient men to meet requirements for a 1,500,000-man Army after July 1.

Eisenhower estimated for the committee yesterday that the Army was receiving 4000 volunteers daily at present and had about 450,000 in the Regular Army. He predicted that by July 1 there would be some 700,000 volunteers, including Air Force personnel.

Yesterday afternoon the House heard Representative Dondero charge that Communists had seized upon grievances of the men "to exploit them at the precise moment of the London conference in order to disintegrate our armed forces, to paralyze our foreign policy and further the interests of Soviet aggression throughout the world."

Cites "Provable Facts"

"Provable facts" upon which he based his statement included:

1. Records show ringleaders of demonstrations were often men with Communist records. He named Herbert Freeman and David Livingstone in Honolulu.
2. Many demands having nothing to do with demobilization were in accord with the Communist Party line.
3. Communist-dominated unions are now demanding that "we bring the GIs home."
4. The Labor Canteen in Honolulu has been a hotbed of Communist propaganda among troops and is now headquarters of the "Oahu Servicemen's Committee for Speedier Demobilization." Head of the canteen is Ewart G. Guinier, a Communist fired by the New York Civil Service Commission in June, 1942.

Onth other side of the Capitol, Senator Austin (R., Vt.), a member of the Senate Military Committee approved the President's appeal for extension of the draft. He said the proposition was "sound" and would enable commitments to be kept upon which precention of "another and more terrible war" depends.

Chairman Thomas (D., Utah), of the Senate Military Committee, said his committee would "examine all facts" on draft extension within the next 60 days. He added, however, that he thought estimates of the size of the occupation force were high.

Patterson Is Sympathetic

Berlin, Jan. 22 (AP).—Secretary of War Patterson expressed sympathy today with wishes of soldiers to go home but said he believed there was growing consciousness among all Americans of "their obligations in preserving the peace."

Patterson, here for a day in a world tour, said the War Department hoped the army of occupation eventually would be composed of volunteers.

Nazi Girl, 18, Claims Hitler As Her Father

Hereford, Germany, Jan. 22 (AP).—British authorities are holding an attractive 18-year-old girl, Gotelind Tortensen, who assert that Hitler was her father.

During numerous interrogations since her arrest in the Magdeburg area, she has insisted that her mother was a Swedish actress who was Hitler's mistress in the late 1920's.

She said her mother and Hitler met frequently in Vienna and that her mother now is dead.

The girl, an ardent Nazi, is being held in an internment camp near Paderborn as a security suspect.

Saw Hitler Every Day

She asserts that she was employed in the Reichschancellery as a secretary, that Hitler saw her every day and treated her affectionately as his daughter.

She was schooled, she said, in the Adolf Hitler School in the Tempelhof section of Berlin. She asserted that she was 14, she was told by Hitler in the presence of Hermann Goering and Heinrich Himmler, since a suiside, that Hitler was her father and she was "conceived by ordinary means."

Hitler was wounded in 1915, British intelligence found evidence that following an operation for the wound in 1929, the German lost his procreative powers.

Boasted of Shooting Yank

The girl said that shortly before Berlin fell, she was sent to Magdeburg with dispatches for a Werewolf formation in that city. She was in uniform and carried a pistol.

The fiirl first was arrested for boasting openly that she had shot an American officer who had tried to seduce her. The case never was proved.

A British army psychiatrist said her general intelligence appeared to be about average but that in his opinion, her claim of being Hitler's daughter may be a "hysterical phenomenon with little or no truth or reality in it."

405 Arlington Traffic Accidents Caused 5 Deaths

Arlington Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard yesterday reported that the county had 503 traffic accidents during 1945, but that only five persons died of injuries suffered in the accidents.

A total of 175 persons were injured in the accidents, Chief Woodyard said, and 1815 arrests were made during the year for traffic violations. The total of miscellaneous arrests made by the department during 1945 was 1389.

Arlington police recovered $18,813.20 worth of stolen property during the year. A total of $42,129.15 worth of property was reported stolen to the department. Fines and costs collected for the year were $24,609.

Speed Up Assailed

Several leaders on Capitol Hill interpreted the speed-up in putting into operation Mr. Truman's plans as a move to get construction started before too great a protest was made. They said that it would be very difficult to stop construction once it had started.

The plans, which call for a new cafeteria, an auditorium, seating 375 persons, conversion of the East Wing into a museum, refurnishing the living quarters and improvements to the grounds have been stoutly opposed by citizens groups, historical and architectual societies.

The American Institute of Architects is presently making a study of the plans and is expected to make recommendations opposing the program by the end of the week.

D. C. Driver Gets 6-Month Sentence

Larry Colbert, 23, of 802 Rhode Island ave. nw., was sentenced yesterday in Upper Marlboro Police Court to serve six months in the Maryland House of Correction following his conviction on a reckless driving charge.

He entered an appeal and was held in $500 bond for the April term of circuit court. Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie acquitted Colbert on a drunken driving charge.

Colbert's automobile was in collision on the Lanham-Severn rd. last September in which Dr. and Mrs. Ronald Cox and their daughter, of 1779 Massachusetts ave. nw., were seriously hurt.

Iran Fighting Flares; Rebels Rout Natives

Tehran, Jan. 22 (AP).—News dispatches today said 50 persons were killed and 100 wounded in a conflict between "revolutionaries" and Zulfaghari tribesmen near Yangikand, in Khamsi province of Russian-occupied northern Iran.

The newspaper Ettelaat said the "revolutionaries first suffered heavy casualties but after receiving reinforcements, including armored cars and machine guns, they drove the Zulfagharis into their villages, which they sacked."

The tribesmen were said by the newspaper to be loyal to the Tehran Government.

Session Postponed

Meanwhile, a secret session of the Iranian Parliament, called for today to elect a new premier, was postponed because of a lack of a quorum. Some deputies said a successor to Ibrahim Hakimi, who resigned Sunday, would not be selected before Saturday or Sunday.

Parliamentary supporters of Qavam-Es-Altaneh, large landowner and thrice Premier of Iran, predicted his election to head the government, asserting "he is the only man who can negotiate with Russia."

In an interview, Altaneh said that, if he is named premier, he would seek direct negotiations with both Russia and the insurgent Azerbaijanian government but would "recognize fully and give continued support to Iran's representatives now before the United Nations Organization's Security Council in London."

Iranian Denies Charge

London, Jan. 22 (AP).—An Iranian embassy spokesman said today there was "no foundation" to charges which the Soviet News Agency Tass said had been published by a Tehran newspaper that Seyed Hassan Taqizadeh, Iranian Ambassador to London, accepted money to prolong British oil concessions in Iran.

Randolph, outvoted in a move to get the President's bill to the floor intact, is expected to ask a rule to confine House amendments to those "germane" to the Administration's fact-finding plan. He told newsmen he is opposed to "drastic legislation" at this time.

Advocates of tight curbs on labor unions, led by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) a ranking member of the House Rules Committee were expected to move instead for a wide open rule.

Smith told the House yesterday: "I think the American people are tired of seeing Congress shadow-boxing with labor. I do not propose to support a rule or a bill that will deceive people into thinking we are doing something when we are not.

"The bill, as reported, has all semblance of teeth removed and is merely a title with a few kind words."

Labor Committee approval of the fact-finding outline, minus subpena and cooling off provisions, came on motion of Representative Gerald W. Landis (R., Ind.) after the committee had sidetracked a move for a thoroughgoing House inquiry. Earlier, the committee had defeated a whole series of motions for reporting the bill in various forms.

caucus and voted unanimously to participate in the Government under Gouin "under certain conditions." The conditions were not made public, but Bidault's retention as foreign minister almost certainly was one of them.

After his acceptance, Gouin conferred with Communist leaders Jacques Duclos and Maurice Thorez and Socialist Chief Daniel Mayer.

Gouin was born October 4, 1884, at Peypin in southern Bonches Du Rhone Department, the son of two school teachers. During th ewar, Gouin helped to organize the resistance and was elected president of the provisional consultative assembly in Algiers.

After Short completed his statement, the committee went into executive session lasting more than two hours. hairman Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) told reporters that members were considering methods of procedure to speed completion of the hearings.

The committee, at its present rate, will be unable to meet the February 15 deadline set by Congress for termination of the inquiry. Meanwhile a legislative snarl has developed in the Senate which will require all the talents of Majority Leader Barkley to unravel. Barkley said no decision was made last night and added that the committee would go into legislative session again today.

Blamed For Losses

The Army's high command was responsible for the losses at Hawaii, Short insisted.

"Due to the fact that the War Department did not make available to Hawaii the information in its possession, the Army forces in Hawaii were unable to prevent the terrific destruction caused by the Japanese attack."

Had he had the information available in Washington, Short said, he would not have so misjudged the situation as to order an alert for sabotage only.

His estimate of the stiuation was not due to carelessness on his part, Short maintained.

Short directly answered the testimony of Gen. George C. Marshall that he did not understand why sabotage was emphasized when most of the correspondence between the War Department and Short related to aircraft and anti-aircraft.

"The reason that sabotage was never discussed in my letters to General Marshall," Short said, "was the fact that we had in Hawaii all of the equipment to prevent sabotage.

No Reason for Requests

There wasn't any reason, he insisted, to make requests upon the Chief of Stafff for material or equipment for anti-sabotage measures.

Referring to the war warning of November 27, 1941, as the message the "Army Pearl Harbor Board called the 'Do-or-Don't' message," Short incorporated its text in his statement.

The message warned him that hostile action from Japan was possible at any moment, but cautioned against alarming the civilian population.

Explains His Reaction

"The impression conveyed to me by this message was that the avoidance of war was paramount and the greatest fear of the War Department was that some international incident might occur in Hawaii and be regarded by Japan as an overt ace."

The only additional information received from the War Department after the receipt of the November 27 message was contained in three messages on sabotage and subversive measures, Short testified.

The next message from the Adjutant General in Washington went to the Hawaiian Department and again urged precautions against sabotage. This also contained a caution against "unnecessary publicity."

Cites Arnold's Message

On November 28 General Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Air Corps, telegraphed the commanding general of the Hawaiian air forces to take precautions against sabotage.

In reply, Arnold was informed that the entire Hawaiian Department "is now operating and will continue to operate under an alert for prevention of sabotage activities."

Seven Hours After Attack

Going into the warning sent to Hawaii on the morning of the attack, Short said it was received there seven hours after the attack.

It was received in the RCA offices in Honolulu at 7:33 a. m., Short said, but was not deciphered until 2:58 p. m.

Interjecting some last-minute information into his prepared statement, Short told the committee that he had recently seen a photostatic copy of this message and that it had been sent without any War Department priority.

Therefore neither RSCA nor the decoders for the Army would have any way of knowing that the message was urgent.

Snyder 'Bludgeoned' Navy In Cutback, Cochrane Says

By the United Press

Vice Admiral Edward L. Cochrane, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, testified yesterday that the Navy Department was "bludgeoned Navy Department was "bludgeoned" into accepting an order by Reconversion Director John W. Snyder to suspend construction of 37 ships for the postwar fleet.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Naval Affairs Committee, reminded Cochrane that the House already had voted for a postwar fleet of 1082 vessels, and asked whether Snyder's action indicated that he, rather than Congress or the Navy, was trying ot fix the size of the fleet.

"Then, to put it into the language of the street," Vinson said, "the Navy Department was just bludgeoned into a position of acquiscence?"

"That's the gist of it," Cochrane answered. He pointed out that the President or anyone to whom he delegated the power could order appropriations withheld if he found the purpose unnecessary.

Representative W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) doubted that the President had such power but Cochrane and Vinson assured him that he did.

"Well, isn't this a basis for impeachment—the refusal to permit exercise of a law enacted by Congress?" Cole asked. "This must be a new concept, where the President can thwart the determination of the people's representatives."

OPA Approves Cheddar Cheese Rise of 3.75 Cents

The price of cheddar cheese will go up 3.75 cents a pound February 1 as a result of removal of the Government's subsidy to manufacturers, the OPA announced last night.

There will be no immediate price increases on cheese foods and spreads containing cheddar. However, manufacturers may apply for increases based on higher production costs when stocks on hand are exhausted.

Meanwhile, the House Banking Committee approved continuation of subsidies on the sugar crop from Hawaii and Puerto Rico until June 30, 1946, but postponed action on other subsidy proposals.

The committee put aside proposals to subsidize meat, almost at the same time that President Truman was recommending to Congress that food subsidies be continued during the year beginning July 1. He said he requested the funds in order to combat inflation and to try to avert a possible 8 per cent increase in the cost of living index for food.

U. S.-Argentina Tension Seen Parley Obstacle

By the United Press

The American republics should do something to avoid allowing the tension between the United States and Argentina to develop into "distintegration of the Pan-American system," Dr. Gabriel Turbay, former Ambassador of Colombia, said last night.

Talking to reporters at the end of a tour of South America, topped off by four weeks in Washington and New York, Dr. Turbay said the "Argentine problem" might be a "dangerous obstacle" for the projected Rio de Janeiro conference.

Subs in Pacific to Return

Pearl Harbor, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Navy announced today that all U. S. submarine units which were in the Pacific on VJ-Day will be returned to the United States by the latter part of March, except for a postwar "nucleus" force to be stationed at Pearl Harbor, Guam and Subic Bay in the Philippines.

Atomic Bomb's Rejuvenating Power Argued

The newspaper Asahi quoted officials of the Japanese Red Cross hospital at Hiroshima as saying that radioactivity generated by the bomb dropped on their city last August had made several women two or three years past the menapouse "like girls again."

Teh story also said thata hen kept by a family living two miles from the center of Hiroshima remused laying eggs after six months of nonproduction, an after-effect of the atomic bomb.

Fear, shock, or lack of food could have caused them to be sterile and postwar relaxation and increased food supply may have aided their recovery, it was pointed out.

N. Y. Bound Freighter Sends Distress Call

New York, Jan. 21 (AP).—The Coast Guard air-sea rescue command said tonight distress signals were received at 6 p. m. from the 7939-ton freighter Mormacmoon, bound for New York from Istanbul. It was approximately 300 miles north of Bermuda.

During a fairly heavy south gale, boiler trouble developed and the ship was pounded by high waves. No casualties were reported. The ship was carrying 99 civilian passengers but no soldiers.

AMERICAN AIRLINES has just ordered 100 new Flagship airliners of a most revolutionary type . . . the largest order of its kind ever placed by any airline.

Known as the Convair 240, this novel and speedy new airliner is being built by Consolidated Vultee, designers and builders of the famed, dependable Liberator bomber.

The Convair 240 is no ordinary aircraft. For the first time in history in a commercial airplane, jet-exhaust propulsion, (as an auxiliary to the conventional propeller drive), will enable you to cruise at an easy 300 m.p.h., with a maximum speed of 350 m.p.h. (In the past, you've traveled on the airlines at a mere 180 m.p.h.)

The Convair 240 has dual-tricycle landing gear and scores of other safety features which will appeal to new, as well as seasoned, air travelers.

In addition, its windows—larger than those of any plane now in operation—will afford you full visibility . . . and its power-plant installation has been especially designed to eliminate exhaust noises and vibration.

American Airlines announces that the 40-passenger Convair 240 will be used for swift economical flights of less than 1000 miles, in the United States, Mexico, and Canada . . . supplementing the larger 4-engine planes.

Look forward to the day when you can "Fly American!" in this wonderful new plane! It will be an experience you'll want to repeat . . . over and over again!

No spot on earth is now more than 40 hours' flying time from your local airport.

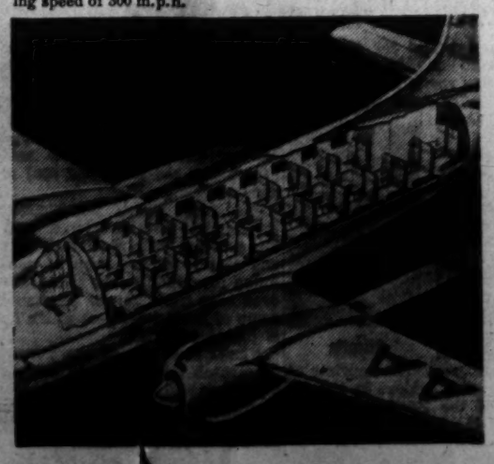
5 miles a minute! This cross-section drawing of the Convair 240 shows how you will relax in solid comfort as this new American Airlines plane speeds you through the air at a cruising speed of 300 m.p.h.



For speed and convenience in loading—When the Convair 240 lands at the airport, the pilot taxis it right under the loading canopy. (No need for you to expose yourself to bad weather at any time.) Down comes the front loading door, with its built-in steps! (No waiting for airport attendants to roll out a ramp.) Then, using the reversible-pitch propellers, the pilot backs the plane away—and taxis to the runway. Stopover time is cut in half!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This chap Alejandro Carrasquel, whom the White Sox bought from the Nats the other day for the $7500 waiver price, was released by the Washington club with no great sense of loss despite the fact he had a winning record. Manager Ossie Bluege was weary of guessing Carrasquel's pitching mood.

POVICH

On the days when the big Venezuelan felt like pitching he was something to see—with a fast ball that sneaked up on the hitter, a side-arm pitch that discombooberated the right-handed batters, and plenty of savvy in his tireless arm. But Bluege could never be certain when Carrasquel felt like pitching.

"When Alex thought he was being overworked, he was pretty useless," says Bluege. "He'd go out there and pitch like he was trying to prove he was overworked. I just thought I'd let the White Sox worry with him awhile."

Clark Griffith readily consented to the sale of Carrasquel. The Nats' owner, in fact, originated the idea of cutting Carasquel loose. He asked waivers on the Venezuelan one night last summer in a fit of high disgust.

That was the night when Carrasquel was beating the Browns with a shut-out performance. The game was vital to the Nats, who were breathing hot on the necks of the Tigers for the league lead. Going into the ninth, Carrasquel had his shutout still going, with two Browns out and two strikes on Lou Finney. On the next pitch, Finney hit a home run and the Nats eventually lost the game.

Griffith went to his office and immediately advised President Will Harridge's office that he was asking waivers on Carrasquel. "That was the dumbest pitch I ever saw in my sixty years of baseball," said Griffith. "That Carrasquel wasn't satisfied to get Finney out. He wanted to strike him out and walk off the field in a blaze of glory, and Finney was laying for it." To Griffith, an old pitcher himself, a fast pitch at that point was the unpardonable sin.

With the White Sox, however, Carrasquel may be in good hands. Jimmy Dykes doesn't scare easily when it comes to handling temperaments. He did all right with Zeke Bonura and Al Simmons and he didn't shrink at signing Hal Trosky, all of them headache boys. Dykes was in the market, too, for Jeff Heath before he was sold to the Nats.

We recall when Carrasquel walked into the Washington training camp in Florida in the spring of 1939, labeled as another one of Joe Cambria's Cuban finds. In the light of Cambria's previous Cuban discoveries, all of them flops, Carrasquel engendered no immediate excitement. He was around for weeks before the fact that he wasn't a Cuban, but a Venezuelan, was elicited from him through interpreters.

His Indian blood was apparent. He had a forbidding-looking countenance, and was a natural for a Hollywood caster who might have been looking for a fellow for a Black Pirate sequence to be climbing the side of a ship with a knife in his teeth. Alex no spik English, and on various occasions readily admitted to being 26 years old, 34 years old and 39 years old.

Bucky Harris was the first to enthuse about him. He watched Carrasquel throw a few balls and said, "I don't know where he learned it, but that guy knows how to pitch." It was a fact. They couldn't tell Alex anything about how to hold runners on bases, or concealing his delivery or the other niceties of pitching. He knew.

Cambria had found him down in the Havana Winter League and was so smitten with the big fellow's success against the Cubans that he trailed him from the Havana park one day and got his name on a Washington contract while they were sitting on a park bench, with an interpreter between.

Carrasquel not only knew how to pitch, but it was quickly evident that he knew how to field his position, too. There were debates on the Washington bench about who was the best fielding pitcher in the league—Sid Hudson or Carrasquel.

Once upon a time in his early days with the Nats, Carrasquel hit a home run. It was one of the longest drives ever hit into the Griffith Stadium left field bleachers. Eventually he lost the game because a home run was hit against him. "That's the trouble with Alex," Bucky Harris moaned. "You never know when he's going to hit a home run or pitch one."

The Sports Patrol:

N. Y. Giants' 1946 Hopes Hinge On Voiselle's Mental Quirk

By William Tucker

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Mel Ott crossed his fingers and mumbled Cajun conjures tonight in the hope that Bill Voiselle, his psychological case study in a pitcher's suit, has straightened out the mental kinks that caused the New York Giants' 1945 tailspin.

"Maybe I'm relying too much on tradition but usually when a young pitcher has a good year his first time up and a sour one the second, he comes back strong for the third season," the Giants' skipper said.

Ott's concern over Voiselle is magnified by the fact that he is at present the best pitcher on the entire staff from a viewpoint of stuff, speed, power and experience.

Those qualities the fireballer from Ninety-Six, S. C., has in abundance and for a while last season he looked like he would develop into a second Bob Feller as he blazed a record of eight victories his first eight times out.

Situation Changed

Then things started happening to Big Bill and he crawled into a shell with his complexes from which no amount of pleading, stern treatment and psychology could dislodge him for the rest of the season.

First the Pirates, then the Cubs blasted him from the box. Then came that awful night of June 1 in St. Louis when Voiselle seemed to regain his stride but blew a two-run lead in the ninth-inning, mainly because he grooved a three-and-nothing pitch to Johnny Hopp and the latter slammed it for a triple. St. Louis won 4 to 3.

Ott slapped the now celebrated $500 fine on Voiselle for his fat pitch to Hopp and although he later refunded the money there was a big stir over it at the time.

"A lot of people blame Voiselle's subsequent collapse on that fine I gave him," Ott said. "Heck, it might have thrown a guy for two or three games but not for the rest of the year."

Things went from bad to worse with Voiselle, and the Giants went down with him since he had held them up around the top the first month of the season. One day in Cincinnati the Giants gave him a four-run lead in the first inning, but Voiselle immediately blew half of it by messing up a grounred to the pitcher's box and not making a move to recover the ball. The Giants got two more runs in the second but Voiselle booted another easy chance and Ott had to take him out.

A Freeze Job

"The way it looked, you would think the guy wasn't trying," Ott said. "But I know that's not so. He just seemed to freeze out there, especially against Cincinnati, the only team in the league he had not beaten his first season with us.

"After a game, I would talk to him till I was blue in the face, but he never seemed to have an answer for what happened to him on the mound. Yet, he always seemed willing enough and there was nothing wrong with his attitude."

NavyCourtmen Work Hard For Fordham, Duke

Anapolis, Jan. 22.—Admitting the Navy basketbal team so far didn't "look too good," Tar Mentor Johnny Wilson said todayq his charges would work hard for tomorrow's tilt with Fordham and Saturday's game with the Duke Blue Devils.

Duke, Wilson emphasized, "is far superior to any team we've met to date."

One reaosn why the Navy outfit's past performances were not altogether satisfactory (although any four of them brought victories) is at "we're missing too many shots." that "we're missing too many shots," Wilson said.

"Last Saturday, for instance," he continued, "we had plenty of shots, but we just didn't hit." He was referring to the Navy-George Washington University game, which was exceedingly close until the last few minutes, when the Tars pulled ahead to win, 53 to 44.

"Our team is away below what it should be on getting rebounds." Wilson's analysis went on. "We've got to make those second and third shots count. That's where the points usually are made."

Rebound work, consequently, will be the main item in practice activities this week, he added.

Wilson said the squad was in god physical shape except for J. C. (Wheel) Barrow, reserve, who sufferred an attack of grippe and was unable to appear for Saturday's game. He's expected to be aboard for today's rehearsal, however.

Peden Predicts Return Of 6-Day Bike Races

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP).—William (Torchy) Peden, veteran six-day bike racing star, dotay predicted the round-and-round-they-go sport on the steeply-banked pine saucers will be revived this year.

Peden, 39, who has won 38 six-day features, said that despite a shortage of bicycle tires he expected several meets to be held later this year. He said he had contacted riders all over the country and was assured most of the veterans and many newcomers wanted to resume war-disrupted competition.

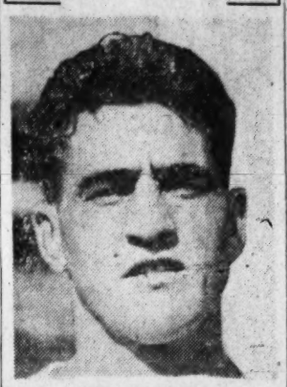
Joe Aguirre To 'Definitely Leave 'Skins



JOE AGUIRRE

Joe Aguirre, talented end and place-kicking specialist of the Washington Redskins for the past five years, "very definitely" will sign with an All-America Conference club, he told The Post last night.

He will play either with the New York, Chicago or Los Angeles clubs, depending on which makes the best offer, but leans toward either New York, where Ray Flaherty, former Redskin mentor, will coach, or Los Angeles, which is near his home.

Flaherty, incidentally, is expected to arrive in town today and is expected to talk business with the big end whose talented toe kicked 7 out of 13 field goals this year to lead the league in that department.

Aguirre cannot understand the Redskins' attitude when the club recently issued a statement to the effect big Joe would be traded if he decided to remain in the National Football League and that "Aguirre does not fit into our plans for next year."

DeGroot Signs Charley O'Rourke

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Dud DeGroot, newly named coach of the Los Angeles, club in the All-American Conference, said today that Charles O'Rourke, former Boston College star but property of the Chicago Bears in the National League since graduation, would play for the California club this fall.

DeGroot, who resigned as coach of the Washington Redskins last week, was in the city to confer with officials of the New York Yankees, also a member of the All-America loop.

Eagles Swap Canale To Boston for Lio

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The Philadelphia Eagles tonight traded Tackle Rocco Canale to Boston for Guard Augie Lio.

Lio, one of the game's expert placekickers, reports to the Eagles after three years with the Detroit Lions and two with Boston. An All-American at Georgetown in 1940, he joined the Lions after graduation and played three seasons. The last two years he was with the Yanks. In his first pro year he won all league honors.

Canale, former Boston College lineman, played with the Eagles before entering military service. He played two games with the Eagles last year while awaiting military discharge.

Novice Entries In A. A. U. Tourney Weigh in Tonight

Weighing in for the novice competition of the annual District A.A.U. Boxing Championships scheduled to open Friday night at Turner's Arena will take place tonight at the District Boxing Commision.

Entries will close at 9 p. m., and after that the boxers will be weighed and paired off.

Entry blanks still are available at Washington Boys' Club, 17th and Mass. ave. se.; Georgetown Boys' Club, Penn. ave. and M st., and Merrick Boys' Club, 603 Mass. ave. ne.

Moxing Chairman Jerry Looney announced that he looked for a record participation in the novice as well as senior events which do not begin operations until Friday, February 1.

Cincinnati Signs Polivka, Harris

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Pitchers Earl Harris and Kenneth Polivka sent their signed contracts to the Cincinnati Reds today to bring the club's total of players signed for the 1946 season thus far to 29.

Fourteen of the players already in the fold are pitchers. Harris is a holdover from last season, while Polivka recently was discharged from the Navy.

Midwest Promised Plenty of Ducks

St. Louis, Jan. 22 (AP).—Midwest duck hunters, disappointed by small flights last season, can expect better shooting next winter.

Ed Russenholt of Winnipeg, Canada, director of operations for Ducks Unlimited told the Missouri Duck Hunters Association here today that drouths in Canada which held the duck population's rate of increase to its lowest percentage in years in 1945 are not likely to recur this summer.

Bullis Snaps Coolidge's Streak, 37-26

Bullis Prep's undefeated Admirals added victory No. 9 to their string as they earned a hard fought win over Coolidge's Colts, 37-26, yesterday at Coolidge. The defeat was the Colt's first of the season.

The heavily favored Admirals had a hard time getting started but after about three minutes of indecisive scrimishing took a lead that mounted to 8-3 by the end of the first quarter. With Billy Earl hitting the nets with regularity, Bullis extended the margin to 17-7 at half-time.

However, the outgunned Colts got a fresh start in the third stanza, and with Bob Kleinknecht and Dick Taylor finding their marks, they moved up to the short end of a 23-21 score. Though they were able to pull up to within one point of the Admirals midway in the final stanze, they couldn't overhaul the visitors. With the score 24-23 with five minutes to play, Bullis' Stu Brown, Bill Tanney, Earl, Jack Stinson, and Jack Donohue tallied field goals, which were countered only by a pair of charity short by Billy Cannon, and the Admirals coasted to victory.

The defeat was no disgrace to the Colts, who though they are unbeaten in interhigh play, lacked the experience to overcome their rivals. The Coolidge defense almost completely bottled up Donohue and Brown, Bullis' high scoring aces, but Earl, noted for his defensive ability, burst forth with 13 points to lead the attack. Dick Taylor was high scorer for the Colts with 9 markers.

Eagles Stop Indians

The Purple rushed into a 10-1 lead in the first quarter of the slow contest, boosted that to 21-3 at the half. However, Anacostia cut its deficit to 23-14 going into the final period.

Portland Buys Orrell From Tigers

Portland, Ore., Jan. 22 (AP).—The Portland Beavers of the Pacific Coast Baseball League have bought back "Bullet" Joe Orrell, right-handed pitcher, from the Detroit Tigers, General Manager William H. Klepper said today.

Orrell, sold to Detroit after the 1942 season, has been shifted between the Tigers and the Buffalo Internationals. He will join the Beavers in February at their San Jose, Calif., training camp.

Phils Purchase Jim Tabor From Boston

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (AP).—Young Bob Carpenter, the man with the money and the intention to spend it, returned to his job as president of the Philadelphia Phillies today—and promptly announced the purchase of Jim Tabor.

The hard-hitting thrid baseman was bought from the Boston Red Sox in what General Manager Herb Pennock said was a straight cash deal. He would not disclose the price.

Tabor thus became the fifth standout infielder acquired by the National League's perennial tailenders within the last several weeks. The others are First Baseman Frank McCormick, Second Baseman Roy Hughes, and Shortstops Skeeter Newsome and Joe O'Neill.

Carpenter, who was discharged from the Army last Saturday, said the Phillies either will move upwards in the National League or "I'll go crazy. I couldn't take a season like last year. I don't see how Herb (Pennock) stood it. Tabor, I'm confident, will help us advance."

Tabor was discharged from the Army two weeks ago after more than a year of service. In 1944, his last year with Boston, he hit .285 in 116 games.

The buying spree hasn't ended by any means, Carpenter indicated. "We want to buy players," he said. "That's plural. We need several players. No one player would do us a lot of good. We have several spots to fill."

Carpenter scotched reports that the Phils were planning to build their own baseball park. "It isn't true," he said. "We haven't given it a thought. We're entirely satisfied with Shibe Park and Mr. (Connie) Mack is a good landlord. We get along fine."

Woodberry Five Clicks, 61-23, Against H-S JV's

Orange, Va., Jan. 22.—Running their season's record to four out of five, Woodberry Forest's fast-traveling basketball team won from Hampden-Sydney JVs today 61-23.

Woodberry Forest's Davidson was high scorer with 17 points followed by his teammate Flowers who had 13 points. Martin was high for Hampden-Sydney with 8.

Hall o' Fame Again Eludes Cubs' Chance

Griffith

And for the second consecutive time Frank Chance, great first baseman and leader of the fabled Chicago Cubs of another day, led only to miss his marble niche.

The regulations are that a player must receive 75 per cent of the total vote cast. Chance, probably the most famous member of the combine of Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance, polled 150 votes, 47 shy of the 197 necessary. With 179 last year he missed by 7, when the 186 were needed.

Frank Chance, 150; Johnny Evers, 110; Miller Huggins, 106; Ed Walsh, 106; Rube Waddell, 87; Clark Griffith, 82; Carl Hubbell, 75; Frank Frisch, 67; Mickey Cochrane, 65; Lefty Grove, 61; Pie Traynor, 53; Mordecai Brown, 48; Joe McGinnity, 47; Dizzy Dean, 45; Joe Tinker, 45; Frank Baker, 36; Chief Bender, 35; Bill Dickey, 32; Rabbit Maranville, 29; Charley Gehringer, 23; and Herb Pennock, 16.

Yanks Will Send Vets to Panama For Spring Drills

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—In order that ex-servicemen may have every chance to round into condition before the baseball season opens, the New York Yankees will send a squad of 33 players under Manager Joe McCarthy to Panama on February 9 for three weeks of intensive preliminary training.

Most of the club's top stars, such as Joe DiMaggio, Joe Gordon, Phil Rizzuto, Tommy Henrich, Marius Russo and Buddy Hassett, who have just shed their uniforms, will be on the squad that will fly from Miami.

Beginning February 21 the squad will play 11 games against the United States Army All-Stars and teams from the Canal Zone League and the Panama Professional League. After the game of March 3 it will fly back to Miami and join another group which will have been in training at St. Petersburg.

Conn, Louis, Meet And Shake Hands

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22 (AP).—Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world, and Billy Conn, contender for the title, met briefly here today—but only to exchange a few pleasantries.

The two just happened to hit town together, Louis for a one-night stand with Lewis Russell's Orchestra, and Conn, breaking training camp at Hot Spring, Ark., for a visit with his family.

Conn was due in New York today to sign with Promoter Mike Jacobs, but said Jacobs went to Florida for a vacation and would sign some other time. The husky contender for the championship meets Louis in New York June 19.

Nimitz Praises Sports World For Role Played in War

Unstinted praise for the parts they played in the war were showered on sports and sports figures yesterday from the boss of the fleet—Adm. Chester W. Nimitz—yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club.

Nimitz

Nimitz especially praised Comdr. Gene Tunney for his job in organizing a physical training program "the imprints of which are still evident in the far reaches of the Pacific, wherever a ship of the United States Navy drops anchor."

High tribute was also paid to such well known athletic figures as Admiral Emory (Jerry) Land, Ted Williams, Buzz Borries, Comdr. Oscar Hagberg, "Killer" Kane, George Earnshaw and Max Farrington by the Admiral who said "sports are the heart and soul of America."

An ardent sports fan himself, the Admiral said his interests now are confined to a spectator's part and that work has been so confining for himself that he doesn't even have time "for an occasional game of horseshoes"—at which he is highly proficient.

Nimitz also praised the Touchdown Club for its part in helping to further athletic events and congratulated the organization for its competitive promotions which further sports in general.

Catholic U. Host Tonight To Loyola

The only game on the collegiate basketball slate here tonight will find Catholic University's Flying Cardinals, still minus their first victory, meeting a smooth Loyola five from Baltimore, 8:45 p. m., at CU.

A preliminary is scheduled between St. John's Cadets and Central's Vikings at 7:15 p. m.

University of Maryland, victorious over North Carolina State last Saturday, will invade Charlottesville tonight to meet University of Virginia. The Cavaliers currently are riding the crest of a four-game winning streak.

George Becker, Georgetown University's physical education director, announced yesterday that the Hoyas' forthcoming game with Army War College, originally scheduled for Friday night, has been switched to Saturday as part of a double-header that will send Catholic against La Salle of Philadelphia.

The twin-bill, the second of the season at Catholic, will open at 8 o'clock with the Georgetwon-Army War College game, with CU and La-Salle to follow. Another full house is anticipated.

Catholic has a difficult assignment tonight against Loyola, which handed Georgetown a 48-41 defeat Monday night. Led by Al Barthelme, the Baltimoreans will be out to keep their current winning streak of five going.

'Blimp Levy Meets Dave Levin Again Tonight at Arena

Benito Gardini of New York and Ivan Komaroff, Russian grappler, meet in the semiwindup. Other bouts find George Macricostas opposing Chuck Ross and Abe Finkelstein against Bill Beard.

Gaithersburg Downs Friends Five, 40-16

B.-C.C. Girls Win 5th

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High girl cagers scored their fifth straight victory of the season yesterday as they nosed out Gaithersburg, 19 to 17, on the winner's court. Sally De Groot's 10 points led the Bethesdans.

Calumet Filly Chases $8.60 Shot to Win

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—For the second day in a row, a heavily played filly from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm failed in her winter debut when Twosy, at odds of 85 cents to $1, could only finish second to H. C. Genter's Swiv in today's surfside purse.

Oddly enough, Twosy was beaten at the same price posted yesterday against her stablemate, Always, which wound up out of the picture entirely. Twosy made a better showing although taking a three lengths beating from Swiv. Third position went to Joseph Tucci's Nowadays, a length and a half farther back.

Running over a track that finally dried out to fast condition this afternoon, Swiv was teletimed in 1:11 flat and was well played at $8.60 for two. A crowd of 16,249 witnessed the six-furlong test for Grade C veterans.

First Outing of Year

This was Twosy's first outing since she won two straight races at Pimlico last fall. Rated one of the best 3-year-old fillies of 1945, she wone 5 of 13 starts last year, with earnings of $25,855.

Swiv, winner of four straight in New England prior to one ineffectual effort here opening day, had all of his speed this time. He opened up a daylight advantage in a jiffy, coasted along four or five lengths on top, and toyed with Twosy's stretch challenge. The latter dropped back to fifth following a fast getaway. Nowadays closed well to be third.

Alex Barth, famous for running second in big stakes, returned to action in the Surfside after an absence of many months and, as expected, could not threaten at the short distance. He finished sixth of the eight starters.

Mahmoudess Disqualified

Mahmoudess, an entry with High Legend and favorite at odds of 3 to 4 in th eseventh event, not only failed to win but, after finishing second, was disqualified and placed fourth.

Chancegain, at $11.50 for two, came from far back to capture the mile and a furlough aflair by a length and a half. Mahmoudess finished a neck better than Pilate's Miss up to second and gave Sheer Luck third position.

Mahmoudess lugged in badly while challenging inside the last furlong, forcing Pilate's Miss in on Sheer Luck, the latter taking up sharply. Sheer Luck had stolen a wide early lead and was tiring when bothered.

Bridgewater Cager Looms As Top Scorer

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Here is an Eagle who is flying high. Nineteen-year-old Bob Richards, a clean cut, aggressive youngster from Champaign, Ill., who finds time from his ministerial studies at Bridgewater College and a small pastorate near Woodstock, Va., to play an outstanding game of basketball for the Eagles, today looms as the "dark horse" candidate to win the Old Dominion intercollegiate scoring race for the 1945-46 season.

This is only Bob's second year in the court sport. He played football and performed on the track team at Champaign before coming to Bridgewater.

During his freshman year Richards didn't participate in sports at Bridgewater, but as a sophomore last year he began operating in a big way. He won a guard berth on the Eagle Five and six first places in the Mason Dixon Conference track meet.

Bob's phenomenal growth as a basketball player is attributable to good work by the Eagles' coach, Don Clague, and to some fine points Bob picked up from Bob Houff, a high scoring teammate in 1944-45.

Right now Richards is tied with Al Marandino of Randolph-Macon for second place in the State scoring race. Both boys have tossed in 179 points. Bob, however, has been scoring at a little better than 22 points a game for his eight games, while Marandino got his 179 points in eight games.

Haefner Given Salary Increase

Southpaw Mickey Haefner yesterday became the first Washington pitcher to accept salary terms for the 1946 season. His signed contract arrived at Griffith Stadium from Haefner's Auburn (Ill.) home.

On the strength of his 16 victories last season against 14 defeats, Haefner was given a salary increase. He had an earned run average of 3.48 per game and it was his pitching in the final weeks of the season that was a powerful factor in keeping the club within striking distance of the league lead.

Cavaliers Engage Lions in Ring

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 22.—University of Virginia's ring team, undefeated in three starts this season, will invade State College, Pa., Saturday for a return engagement with Penn State's Nittany Lions.

In their last match, the Cavaliers outpointed the Lions, 4½-to-3½.

Also on Saturday, Virginia's wrestling team will meet University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The revival of the sport this year has produced a tie with Duke and a triumph over Johns Hopkins.

Fla. Extends Suspensions Of 2 Jockeys

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP). — Jockeys Bobby Strange and Luts Torres and Trainer Vincent Cicero, all set down during the recent Gulfstream park meeting and their cases referred to the Florida State racing commission, had their suspensions extended today by the commission at its regular meeting.

Cicero is banned for the remainder of the Florida racing season, slated to end April 19; Strange's suspension is increased 30 days as of January 14, and Torres' ban is continued to February 12, or until the next meeting of the commission.

Cicero saddled the winner Gypster January 9 at Gulfstream and was suspended January 12, along with all horses in his care, on report of the State chemist that the urine test of Gypster showed positive presence of a stimulant.

Strange was astride Do-Reigh-Mi in the Gulfstream handicap January 14, the race in which Proof Coil fell and was injured. Do-Reigh-Mi won the race and Strange was held partly responsible for the accident to Proof Coil.

Torres was suspended January 3 for the balance of the Gulfstream meeting for actions detrimental to the best interests of racing, charged by the stewards with connection in the alleged attempted bribery of a trainer and jockey.

Champion Terrier Given Suspension

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Officials of the American Kennel Club said today that Thomas H. Snethen of Allison Park, Pa., owner of the Scottish terrier that went best in show at the Westminster show last year, had been suspended for six months, effective January 8.

Snethen, owner of the champion Shieling's signature, was charged with using unsuitable language to a judge, L. J. Iriberry, while the latter was in the ring at Richmond, Va., on October 11.

The 1946 Westminster show, slated for Madison Square Garden on February 12 and 13, closed its entry books today with approximately 2580 dogs listed to be shown.

Fair Grounds Opens Saturday

New Orleans, Jan. 22 (U.P.)—Fair Grounds officials announced last night that the re-opening of the track, scheduled for Wednesday, again has been delayed, this time until Saturday.

The track closed January 17 because, officials said, the bad weather had made the footing too dangerous to continue. Wet weather over the weekend has caused the latest postponement, tonight's announcement said.

Cornell Set to Play Havana in Cuba

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 22 (U.P.)—The Cornell University basketball team will accept an invitation to play the University of Havana in Cuba if leaves can be arranged for Naval trainees on the team, it was announced today.

Dr. Julian Modesto Ruiz, president of the University of Havana athletic commission, invited Cornell to play Havana and other amateur clubs in a three-game series during the between-term period February 26-March 6.

Tad Weiman Arrives In Japan; To Aid Game

Yokohama, (Tuesday), Jan. 22 (AP). Elton (Tad) Wieman, former head football coach at Princeton and the University of Michigan, arrived in Japan today to assist in coaching the Eleventh Airborne Angels for their Army olympic championship game with the Honolulu All-Stars in Tokyo January 27.

Jock Sutherland, former head coach of Pittsburgh University and the professional Brooklyn Dodgers, is helping to coach the Honolulu eleven.

Frnka to Retain Tulane Coach O'Boyle

New Orleans, Jan. 22 (AP).—Tulane's new head football coach, Henry Frnka, will retain former Tulane Star Tommy O'Boyle, of Gary, Ind., on the coaching staff he is now assembling for the Green Wave.

Claude (Little Monk) Simons, Tulane athletic director, said Frnka would return to New Orleans February 1, to plan his first spring training with the Greenies.

CHANCEGAIN, $11.50, $6.70, $5.10; PILATE'S MISS, $6.80, $4.90; SHEER LUCK, $4.10.

CHANCEGAIN, outrun early, gradually gained on leaders, closed with determination and drew away. MAHMOUDESS, rated behind leaders early, bore in sharply midway of stretch, causing SHEER LUCK to take up abruptly and also bothering PILATE'S MISS, then continued on to outlast PILATE'S MISS. The latter in closest pursuit to far turn, took command, then weakened in final drive. SHEER LUCK stole long lead but was tiring fast when bothered. A foul claim against Mahmoudess was allowed and she was placed fourth.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf course). Purse, $3000. For 4-year-olds and up; claiming price $5000. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:35. Off at 5:36. ENTERTAINMENT took lead at once, widened out on field and won as rider pleased. FLEETAIR, in closest attendance on winner throughout, was hard pressed to stave off BETTY'S BOB. The latter gradually improved position and closed with a rush on inside. PEACE FLEET, close up all the way, had no excuses. SUNNY JACK came from far back. THE McCLAIN should improve off this effort.

Decision Near On Mine Union Return to AFL

By Harold W. Ward

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Barring a last-minute fight, the way appeared to be open today for the long-heralded return of John L. Lewis and his half-million United Mine Workers to the AFL.

The sole obstacle apparent was a "recent" recommendation by the influential AFL Metal Trades Department that the next vacancy on the 15-man executive council go to Charles McGowan, head of the Boilermakers.

Lewis Insists on Seat

Lewis has made a seat on the council for the Mine Workers a condition to bringing his union back to the Federation, which they left in 1936, in the struggle over formation of the CIO. The miners bolted the CIO, too, in 1942.

In the opinion of some labor officials, the mine leader's reaffiliation with the AFL at this time would emphasize his recent bitterness toward the CIO leadership—now engaged in crucial wage struggles in steel, meat packing, autos, and electrical manufacturing.

The Metal Trades Department may oppose Lewis' appointment to the council vacancy because it has lost its only direct representative with the departure of Harvey W. Brown, head of the machinists. The machinists left the Federation in October, after a losing jurisdictional tiff with the carpenters. AFL President William Green said the council had formally voted Brown's seat on the council vacant yesterday.

Tobin Believed Receptive

Two members who are absent from the Miami winter meeting of the council, Daniel J. Tobin of the Teamsters and George Harrison of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, are expected before the weekend.

Tobin in the past has fought Lewis, but like Green, he appeared to be on friendly terms with the heavy-browed miners' boss at the November labor-management conference in Washington.

Green said the vacancy would be acted on before the council adjourns January 30 or 31.

Howard's Stable Leads Winners

Acadia, Calif., Jan. 22 (AP).—Charles S. Howard, whose Lou-Bre won the only $50,000 handicap run thus far at Santa Anita's current meeting, leads the track's money winners with $63,310. His horses have been in the money 15 other times.

Second is Louis B. Mayer with $51,420, followed by Mrs. Ada L. Rice of Chicago with $42,535 and C. J. Sebastian of Seattle, whose Galla Damion captured last Saturday's San Felipe Stakes, with $24,620.

Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham's Maine Chance Farm, national leader in 1945, has yet to win a purse at Santa Anita.

Authority to Set Price Ceilings On Houses Sought by Snyder

Authority to channel a "substantial portion" of building materials into homes for veterans until the end of 1947—as well as for placing immediate price ceilings on old and new homes—was asked of Congress yesterday by Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, who said inflationary implications of the current housing situation "would be difficult to exaggerate."

Giving the Administration's specific approval to these provisions of the Patman bill for the first time, the reconversion director told the House Banking and Currency Committee: "It would be disastrous to delay when we see the danger signs that are already so clear. The problem must be dealt with now."

Program Is Stressed

Although priorities over home building materials were reinstituted on January 15, the authority for this stems from the Second War Powers Act which has been extended only through June 30, Snyder pointed out. A longer-range program is needed at once to prevent a withholding of materials, to halt increasing speculation in the real estate field, and to stabilize the whole housing situation.

Beyond priorities and price control, the Administration's plans for an "emergency housing program" as promised by President Truman in his message to Congress have not officially crystalized. They will be presented to the House committee by Wilson Wyatt, the new housing expediter now operating inside Director Snyder's OWMR—and with an unknown amount of authority.

Snyder refused to commit himself yesterday on the subject of construction subsidies, which the Patman bill directs should be used to break bottlenecks and spur building activities.

"The feasibility and advisability of subsidies as a part of our emergency program are currently being studied by Mr. Wyatt," he declared. "His investigators have not as yet advanced to a point where it is possible to state any positive conclusions."

Defends Wyatt

Several sharp clashes occurred between Snyder and committee members over how much authority Wyatt has to make up his own mind on subsidies and over the question of whether a separate agency should not be set up for Wyatt to operate. Snyder declared his strict opposition to a separate emergency housing agency and said Wyatt had not complained about lack of power.

Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) said he would drop his insistence on the separate agency if Snyder would translate Wyatt's powers into writing or directives. "I want to known what is down on paper, and want Mr. Wyatt to have these papers and directives with him when he comes before the committee, so we can be assured. You are a busy man, with enormous powers. You must delegate some of those powers."

Subsidy provisions of the Patman bill will be rewritten to make them more specific, committee members declared after the Snyder hearing, and to insure their use "wherever needed, whether that means for wages or for prfabrication."

Mother Warns Girl, 29, She Will Not Accept Her Devoted Suitor as Son-in-Law, Because Of Religious Difference; Is This Justified?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 29 years old. For several years I have been going with a fine man whom I love very much. We have many interests in common, like and enjoy the same things, and get along exceptionally well. He has offered me marriage but because of his religion my mother refuses to accept him as a son-in-law.

During these years of our courtship my mother has been in our company most of the time, and in my opinion she has treated him almost as she would her own son. But religion is very sacred to her, and if I married out of my faith, she could never face her relatives, —so she says,—except with shame.

Furthermore, she believes we could never be happy unless we were of the same faith. Unlike her, he is very broadminded and has even said he would embrace my faith, if necessary to appease my mother. I am torn between my love for him and my sense of duty to her, whom I also love very dearly. Should I give him up completely or accept his marriage offer against my parents' wishes?

K. S.

Mother's Against Marriage, Period

DEAR K. S.: If this young man were a deacon in her church, I'll bet your mother still would have conscientious sounding objections to offer, as to why she couldn't rightly espouse him as a son-in-law. The truth about her is, she doesn't want anything to happen, and would refuse to sanction any arrangement, which might break up or substantially interfere with this peculiarly close,—indeed, this marrow-sucking,—social companionship she enjoys with her dutiful darling daughter.

You get the idea? She doesn't want you to marry—period. Maybe she hasn't faced the fact that the purpose of all her behavior is to keep you single while she lives; but such is the case, nevertheless. How do I know? Well, look at her long indulgence of this young man's courtship, in which she has shared the spotlight with you. His religious beliefs were the same from the beginning as now. That being so, if she were thinking of marriage for you,—as a truly beneficent mother naturally would,—and if she sincerely construed him to be, from the religious angle, an improper candidate for your affections, she would have preached against him from the start, on that ground.

She didn't. She left things drift, meantime keeping herself to the fore. From which I infer: 1. That she regarded each week, month or year additional at your elbow as so much velvet. 2. That she found it expedient (and maybe also a social convenience in getting about) to tolerate the young man if your draft on his attentions, shared with her, kept you content in the present, oblivious of the morrow. 3. That as a result of long practice and success (from her viewpoint) in managing you, she felt instinctively (if not consciously) capable of "dealing" with a marriage proposal to her satisfaction, if it developed.

Her Argument Hits Herself

WELL, it has developed. And now she seizes on the sectarian difference, which she was pleased to overlook before, to implement her purpose of keeping you single. Since he is a fine young man, ready to embrace your faith if necessary to appease her, her objection on religious ground doesn't make sense. What it does do is boomerang, to indict her as the person living spiritually in outer darkness. She is preaching bigotry, even while pointing with pride to the creed which suckled her; and I am reminded of what a great churchman once said of another like her,—"These lay theologians with their zealotry do more harm than the ordained can undo."

There you have my appraisal of your mother's stand. I think it is intensely selfish and pharisaical,—"outwardly religious but inwardly not: self-righteous," as Webster says. But you must make up your own mind whether to vote with or against her. Since she has led you by the hand for nigh 30 years, it would be a miracle if you could muster the spunk and independence to break with her, defy her disapproval and be happy without her blessing, if she remains unforgiving,—as you must do if ever you are to have a normal adult life, with husband, home and children of your own. Given the courage to take that course with your young man, I daresay you would never regret it. And in any event, whatever the outcome, it couldn't be worse than withering away under her thumb. M. H.

A CHICKEN IN EVERY POT has been the cry for many years. The kind of chicken you purchase governs the cookery process. The kind to buy for thrifty meals is one not too ancient, yet beyond the broiler class. With chicken and gravy as a point of departure, you can branch out to all sorts of delicious entrees. Here is a favorite dish, tender stewed chicken with noodles

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

So After the Bright Forecasts We're Eating Chicken Again

Grocers and cooks had high hopes that come the end of rationing their troubles would diminish. But with the Nation's labor pains entering the food picture, and black marketeers going strong, they're experiencing considerable confusion again.

Food forecasts made after rationing discontinuances, made the food picture very bright. But blueprints have been somewhat mutilated so what we eat hinges on more than income distribution, weather conditions, production, the food merchant and the cooks. It also hinges on strikes and our own brand of war criminals—the Black Marketeers. If these operators choose to tie up the butter supply unless an order is placed for eggs, the cook gets along with little or no butter. If the onion market is put askew with such operations, then a dash of other kind of seasoning goes into the pot.

Square Meals Still Possible

Food is the balance between normality and abnormality. But to hear people talk about eating, you would think that we are about to become a starving Nation instead of being in an enviable position regarding food. To be sure, some foods are on the short side. But we still have poultry, fish, eggs, fruits and juices, fresh and canned vegetables, cereal products and milk.

The chicken supply seems to be holding up well. And chicken can be extended in many ways so that it is not too costly a food. I am always glad for the opportunity to run in an extra chicken dish for the week.

What's in a Name?

The names of chicken dishes vary in localities. Recipes in the process of being handed down take strange turns and change their names. Chicken a la King when originated was called "Keene" rather than "King." This is the story of its origin:

The late J. W. Keene, well known in race horse circles, owned a horse, "Fox Hall," who won the Grand Prix de Paris—the first American-trained horse to achieve this honor. Some of Mr. Keene's English friends gave a party for him sometime later at London's famous Claridge. The chef made a special chicken dish for the occasion, over which the guests drooled. It was given the name, Chicken a la Keene. Mr. Keene learned to make the dish to perfection and his friends felt flattered to be asked to eat his specialty.

The Claridge chef pounced a large chicken in broth in his kitchen. Then he cut off the white meat, diced it and sent it to the dining room where, on a chafing dish, the maitre d'hotel simmered in it fresh butter and then added diced green pepper, a pint of cream, a wine glass af Madeira and, when the mixture had thickened to the right consistency, garnished it with sliced truffles.

Oscar Tschirky, the famous host at the Waldorf in New York, has done a bit of improvising of this delicious chicken concoction, changing from truffles to mushrooms, using sherry instead of Madeira and a dash of Hollandaise. Then she named his dish Chicken a la King, in honor of one of his favorite clients, James Gore King of banking fame.

Delicious, Though Battle-Born

Another great dish made of chicken that has been greatly varied since it was born in the din of the battle at Marengo, is a dish of that same name. This was a great military triumph for Napoleon, so he ordered dinner to be served for his great generals. Dunan, the chef of Napoleon, never tarried when he knew the general wanted food, so a catch was made of chickens, tomatoes, garlic, a flask of oil and a bottle of brandy, and from these ingredients became the delectable Chicken Marengo.

The name may sound fancy, but the dish is one of simple preparation. This is the way to proceed:

CHICKEN MARENGO

Cut up a young chicken as for a fricassee. Brown the pieces in butter, margarine or olive oil. Salt, pepper and add a bouquet of parsley, thyme, bay leaf, unpeeled shallot and a tiny bit of garlic Cover utensil and cook gently until almost tender, then sprinkle with flour and stir for a few minutes with a wooden spoon. Moisten with a large glass of white wine, two spoonsful of tomato sauce, a few peeled and blanched mushrooms. Allow this to cook gently for a few minutes, then remove the shallot and garlic, and serve the chicken on a heated platter covered with the sauce and garnished with croutons.

Many persons like stewed chicken with dumplings or potpie. Recently I received a request from my publisher saying a friend had tried to find a recipe for Southern Dumplings which were diamond shaped dough pieces cooked in stewed chicken. This was a dish that my grandmother made when I was a child, but rarely do you find recipes for same in cookbooks. The following recipe is one I sent in answer to the request, for which I received a letter of appreciation saying "the recipe is exactly what I have been looking for."

SOUTHERN DUMPLINGS

Sift 2 cups sifted flour with 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in ¼ cup shortening with 2 knives or pastry blender. Add ½ cup milk, using more if necessary, to make a stiff dough. Roll out thin and cut into strips about 2 inches long by 1½ inches wide. Sprinkle lightly with flour and drop into boiling chicken stock. Cover cooking utensil closely and boil gently for about 30 minutes.

Time of Crisis

(From The Truthtown Torch)

LEADING Truthtown citizens last night jumped into the breach to save civilization. At a mass meeting in the Babylonian room of the Hotel Swank, a Crisis Committee was formed to "take steps to meet the perils of the moment."

"These are times that try men's souls," announced Whiffington Mollusk, who presided. "We are facing a meat famine. Our womanhood has been deprived of rayon nightgowns by bureaucrats. Our veterans take off their uniforms and find no Tuxedos. We can't get more than 2½ per cent on our money, or decent reservations to Florida. The war is over and we haven't gone back to normalcy. We demand to know why."

"Mr. Chairman," began Erasmus J. Dare, president of the Atomic Age Citizens, "the destiny of our planet——"

"This meat famine is the last straw!" broke in Mrs. Philemon Piffle. "We were just getting back to giving really nice parties again. How can you have a beautiful party or a brilliant social event without baked ham or filet mighon? Everyone is sick of squabs."

"What I want to know," broke in Mrs. Casimer Cache, "is what are we women going to do when all the stored roasts, steaks, chops, hams, sausages, legs of lamb, bologna, tinned meats, etc., in our refrigerators give out?"

"I HAVE an idea!" exclaimed Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, Truthtown's ace project woman. "Let's organize some hunting clubs and bring in wild game! Think of all the smart hunt breakfasts we could have!"

"Mr. Chairman," interposed Dr. Dare," if starving Europe drifts into anarchy and chaos——"

"This meat sitution is urgent!" exclaimed Mrs. Stuyvesant Mixmaster. "The Association for Advancement, of which I am president, is holding its annual luncheon next week. We will lose all our prestige as the first club of the town if he have to serve chicken a la King."

"Senator Theopolis Tweet will be here in just a moment to address us on the meat situation," announced the chairman.

"Senator Tweet is detained to help in a filibuster," reported Ethelbert Vanderpuffer.

"While we are waiting," spoke up Dr. Dare, "I should like to introduce Prof. Phineas Cosmos of the League of Frightened Scientists——"

"When," interposed Mrs. Slinker Hopping, "are we going to do something about bringing the boys home. There are not enough young men for the dances. At my daughter's party the other night not a single member of the stag line had ever shaved."

"WHERE is Representative Orlando Calliope?" asked the chairman. "He could give us some data on that."

"He's at a meeting of the Committee to Forestall the Atomic Age," reported Mr. Vanderpuffer. "I should be there myself this minute."

"Now Professor Cosmos," continued Dr. Dare, "has perfected plans for a truly safe bomb shelter 3000 feet underground——"

"We haven't done anything about the rayon nightgowns," interrupted Mrs. Narcissus Glyde. "Our American women will be the joke of the world if they have to wear cotton nightgowns."

"This nylon stocking distribution is the worst disgrace," added Mrs. Pierrepont Preen. "Any ordinary person can get them by standing in line two hours. The stores should protect their better customers.

"We haven't settled the Tuxedo question," reminded Bridgeport Billow. "The Sons of Crustaceans have their annual banquet the week after next, and in 160 years no one has gone in a business suit. I have outgrown both my Tuxedo and my tails. There are none to be had."

"We need some leadership in the White House," declaimed Col. Rufus Rossiter Antelope.

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, Truthtown's eccentric dowager, moved that a committee be sent to Europe to study methods of getting along without ham and Tuxedos. Mr. Mollusk hurriedly adjourned the meeting after announcing he would appoint a special crisis committee.

Jordans Have Son

From Duluth, Minn., comes word of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Jordan. Mrs. Jordan is the former Miss Aileen Havlin Harris, daughter of George Harris and the late Mrs. Harris. The baby will be christened George Harris Jordan.

Aline Munson, Capt. Sullivan To Be Married

At a small dinner party at the Shoreham Hotel last night Col. and Mrs. F. Granville Munson announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Aline Munson, to Capt. Edward J. Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Sullivan, Salem, Mass.

Delar.

MISS ALINE MUNSON
. . . early spring bride

The bride-elect was graduated from National Cathedral School and Wellesley College. She recently returned from the Southwest Pacific, where she served for two years with the Red Cross.

Captain Sullivan was graduated from St. John's Preparatory School, Danvers, Mass., and attended Northeastern before entering the service. He recently returned after 33 months combat duty in the Southwest Pacific.

Pignatellis Fete Richard Lounsberys

Honoring Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lounsbery of New York, the Prince and Princess Pignatelli entertained at dinner last night at their home on Massachusetts ave. Twenty guests were invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Lounsbery are old friends of the Pignatellis and are visiting them here for about a week.

Comdr. Henry, Bride To Be Honor Guests

Comdr. Barklie McKee Henry, USNR, and his bride, the former Mrs. Margaret Trowbridge Griggs, are the guests in whose honor Clarence Hewes will entertain at dinner this evening. Mr. Hewes also was host at dinner last night.

The marriage of Commander Henry and Mrs. Griggs took place December 18 in Cheyenne, Wyo.

Town Talk

By Eva Hinton

POPULAR MRS. Durham Wood has shaken the snowflakes of Washington from her shoulders and entrained for Palm Beach, sunshine, and sea-bathing. She will visit her aunt, Mrs. Aivin T. Hert, who used to live in Washington and has many friends here.

Before she left, Mrs. Wood gave a very gala dinner party at the 1925 F Street Club. I don't even dare tell you that we had the club's top-of-perfection filet of beef with mushrooms for fear you will be meat-starved by the time this gets into print.

An interesting guest recently arrived in the United States was Lieut. Comdr. John S. Laughlin, nephew of the late Irwin Laughlin, one-time Ambassador to Spain. Following the bent of his uncle, Commander Laughlin has just completed an assignment as Naval Attache at our embassy in Greece.

Serving in Greece as Military Attache at the same time with Commander Laughlin was Col. Sterling Larrabee of Warrenton, also recently returned to the United States. And, incidentally, good news for their friends is that come spring, the popular Larrabees will reopen their beautiful old house, Oakwood, outside of Warrenton.

Well, to get back to Mrs. Wood's dinner! One tall, dark and dithery lady arrived in a tailspin. Said she: "I haven't been asked out of an evening for a week and tonight I was invited to dinner four times. It was like the little boy who boasted to his pals that he'd seen 13 snakes that summer at camp, 12 different ones and the same one twice. I was asked to three different dinners and to one of them twice, once by the hostess and again at the last second, by a guest whose wife had produced a temperature of 102 as she was practically walking out of the door. He didn't dare upset the table-seating and he knew the hostess and I were favorite friends!"

I HAVEN'T succeeded in getting back to Mrs. Wood's dinner, but here I go again! Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, she wearing a gorgeous set of topazes with her black evening gown, Mrs. Noyes Lewis in gay and witty mood, and Mrs. Wallach Merriam and her charming daughter-in-law, Mrs. Jock Merriam.

Mrs. Ed Foley looked like a pretty schoolgirl in a black robe style topped by a pale blue jacket and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel wore a filmy gown of scarlet lace. I was so dazzled by Mrs. Blair Childs' diamond and ruby bracelet, a wedding anniversary rememberance from her husband, that I didn't notice her dress. Oh, yes, it was black velvet, off the shoulders, with a band of ermine at the neckline.

Amusing Mrs. Reginald Winn has wit to match her famous aunt, Lady Astor, whom she was meeting in New York next day. At Mrs. Wood's dinner Mrs. Winn looked charming in pale blue worn with a pearl and diamond necklace.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. John Gaswell, Thomas Leiter, James F. Mitchell, jr., Jack Logan, John Hall Allen and Thomas Clagett. The latter was receiving congratulations on his brand new daughter.

After dinner Kurt Hetzel played some dreamy Viennese waltzes and most of the guests drifted off on tingling toes to the second of the "Three Dances," successor to the "Dancing Class" of other years.

One of the dinner guests who hadn't been invited to join the series of dances remarked, "I think I'll get up a series of dances for all us left-overs and call it the 'Dancing Mass, or the Three Prances.'" (Be sure and use the broad A on each word for the most reasonant effect.

Garfinkles Return Here From South

The bride is the former Miss Henrietta Chernikoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Chernikoff, this city, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Henry Garfinkle and the late Mr. Garfinkle, Nyack, N. Y.

The bridegroom's sister, Miss Shirley Garfinkle, was maid of honor in ice blue brocaded satin with arm bouquet of American Beauty roses. Jackie Chernikoff acted as ring bearer.

Bert Reisler, New York, served as best man, and ushers were Charles Chernikoff, Joe Garfinkle, Sam Chernikoff, Charles Ginsberg, Harry Chernikoff and Mac Taberoff.

Mr. Garfinkle, who was a lieutenant in the Merchant Marine, saw action in the Atlantic, Pacific and Mediterranean and was awarded the Silver Star.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IT ISN'T BEING advertised, but if newly appointed Stuart Symington makes good as Assistant Secretary of War he is almost certain to be upped to the No. 1 job in the War Department, replacing Bob Patterson as Secretary of War.

Meanwhile, GIs can expect Symington to lean over backward to give them a break. He's that kind of guy. Probably the best of President Truman's Missouri appointments, Symington startled businessmen several years ago by putting a share-the-profits plan into effect in his Emerson electric plant in St. Louis. It worked wonders with labor.

In Washington, Symington has surprised earlier critics by his forthright handling of the extremely difficult surplus property snarl. One of the last things he did as surplus property administrator was to force the Aluminum Co. of America to turn over its patents to the Government.

On the surface, Alcoa's offer looked like a magnanimous gesture, but behind the scenes it took some tough talking by Symington and Assistant Attorney General Wendel Berge to put it across.

Andy Mellon's Monopoly

THE ALUMINUM corporation, which made the late Andrew Mellon one of the three richest ment in America, had long enjoyed an airtight monopoly, was exposed by the Justice Department for combining with the Germans to curtail magnesium production—essential to the airplane industry. As a result, an antitrust decision now hangs over Alcoa's head.

This was the weapon used by Symington and Berge to bludgeon Alcoa into sharing its aluminum patents.

During the war, Alcoa produced aluminum in Government-owned plants, but, thanks to the vigilance of the Justice Department and Secretary Ickes, a policy was declared whereby Alcoa could not increase its monopoly by acquiring these plants after the war.

The problem, however, was to find another buyer to operate the Government plants—especially since this buyer would not have aluminum patents. Louis Reynolds of the Reynolds Metals Co. was willing to take over two large plants in Arkansas, but he could not operate without using Alcoa's lime-sinter-soda patents. And Alcoa was only willing to rent these patents at prohibitive royalties.

Finally, about 10 days ago, Arthur Davis, head of Alcoa, was summoned to the office of Attorney General Tom Clark. With him came I. W. Wilson, also of Alcoa, and Leon Hickman, their attorney. Sitting on the opposite side of the council table were Symington, Sam Husbands of the RFC, plus Wendell Berge, Ernest Meyers and Irving Lipkowitz, all of the antitrust division.

The session lasted two hours. Alcoa's Davis and Attorney Hickman did most of the talking. They proposed first that they would give their lime-sinter-soda process to Alcoa's competitors, provided the Government would drop its antitrust case. Assistant Attorney General Berge, however, said "No." Berge is a mild-mannered man, but just as tenacious as the late Senator George Norris, from whose State of Nebraska he comes.

Then the Alcoa executives proposed to barter their patents for the right to build new factories of their own. This is forbidden them under the court ruling. Again Berge said no.

The meeting ended in a stalemate. Next day, Alcoa's executives appeared in Symington's office ready to grant Reynolds their patents on payment of a graduated royalty. Symington, however, showed them the door.

That night they returned with a complete surrender. As a result of smart negotiating by Symington and Berge, Alcoa's patents, for years an airtight monopoly, were turned over to the Government for the use of its competitors.

Note—Symington's chief problem as Assistant Secretary of War will be his father-in-law. The latter, Republican Representative Jim Wadsworth of New York, believes Army brass hats can do no wrong. Some people are already wondering how much Republican father-in-law Wadsworth will dominate his Democratic son-in-law in the War Department.

Taft Chases "Communism"

SENATOR ROBERT TAFT of Ohio has just lost a one-man war he has been staging to control a faculty appointment to his old alma mater—Yale.

Taft has been moving heaven and earth to prevent Tom Emerson, counsel for the Economic Stabilization Board, from becoming a professor on the Yale faculty, even going so far as to tip off Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis, who joined in the campaign. Basis of Taft's opposition was that Emerson was a New Dealer, a radical, and a lot of other horrid things—possibly even a Communist.

Taft even journeyed back to Yale to vote at the board of governors' meeting against Emerson's appointment. In the end he lost—by the decisive margin of 9 to 5. Such conservative and respectable gentlemen as Judge Thomas Swan of the United States Court of Appeals, and Thomas Thacker, former Solicitor General under Hoover, voted aganist their old friend Taft. They couldn't see any red complexion around Emerson at all.

Capital Chaff

ED PRICHARD, the big Kentucky brain-truster, is being offered the job of counsel of the Democratic National Committee . . . He doesn't know whether to take it or run for Congress for the seat now occupied by Congressman Virgil Chapman. The White House is talking about a steering committee consisting of FC Chairman Paul Porter, Bob Nathan and Assistant Postmaster Gail Sullivan to function between Democratic headquarters and the White House . . . Bob Hannegan will soon launch an all-out drive to get the President's legislation program passed on Capitol Hill. Hannegan's first target will be the minimum wage bill increasing minimum wages to 65 cents an hour . . . President Truman has begun a major shake-up of the White House staff. The first to go was George Allen, who becomes an RFC director. Next will be another Mississippian, the President's naval aide, Capt. James Vardaman, jr., who will become a member of the Federal Reserve Board. Judge Sam Rosenman resigns this Friday.

New Dive-Bomber Disclosed to Go With Supercarriers

With a maximum range of more than 1700 miles, the announcement said, the plane can dive vertically at more than 500 miles an hour and plaster its target with 4000 pounds of bombs or rockets, or a torpedo and nearly 2000 pounds of bombs or rockets.

Designated the BTM-Mauler, the new craft was designed and built by the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore.

New Enterprise To Be Headed By Gen. Lord

By S. Oliver Goodman

Maj. Gen. Royal B. Lord, retired, yesterday announced formation of the World Wide Development Corp. to provide technical services to private or Government industries in the foreign field.

Gen. Lord

The organization will have offices in Washington, as well as New York, London, Paris, Cairo and Rio de Janeiro.

General Lord, formerly deputy chief of staff to General Eisenhower, is chairman and president of the new corporation. He said yesterday that the firm would aid "in the development of new products and industries both here and abroad" and will offer "economic research, industrial and engineering service on projects sponsored either privately or by foreign governments."

In addition to General Lord, directors named are: Dr. Lauchlin Currie, formerly an assistant to President Roosevelt; Robert R. Nathan, formerly with the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion; Edward T. Dickinson, jr., formerly with United States Steel Corp. as research assistant to the chairman; Arnold Grant, attorney; Herman Starr, president of Diamond Productions, Inc.; Ben Freedman, industrialist.
